This week features our Dairy Plus book, which highlights a variety of dairy producers and systems operating throughout the region, plus plenty of business and cooperative news.

In a busy fair week, there's always room for a large dairy show, such as the one at the Gratz Fair all day Tuesday. Jerseys swept the supreme dairy championship in the youth and open shows. Here, Harold Harpster, Boalsburg, holds onto an 8-year-old Jersey named supreme dairy champion of the open show. At left is Gratz Fair Queen Deb Rudy and at right, judge Eric Stine. CATTLE: Compared to Tuesday, slaughter steers sold fully .50 higher, with prices up to 1.00 higher on the top quality steers. Buyers were relatively active in procuring all grades, and very active in their pursuits to own the fancy ones. However, buyer interests lightened up late as loads were already full, which led to a few steers being bought a little cheaper than the bulk. Holstein steers sold with a higher undertone on a thin test. Holstein receipts remain fairly light, with Thursday?s supply including several beef crosses which sold at a premium. There were not enough slaughter heifers for a market test.

September 16, 2002
Report Supplied By Auction

HOG RECEIPTS: 316 head, last Monday 315; last year 1051.

Compared to last Monday, barrows and gilts sold 3.00-5.00 higher in very active trading. Butchers weighing in the 200-250 lb range were in very good demand, trading sharply higher, with other weight classes not far behind. Higher terminal hog prices over the past couple of weeks and a firmer futures Board, have coupled to bring a breath of fresh air to the slaughter market. However, terminal markets are reporting weaker bids as of Monday, with private analysts expecting another dip in prices before the week draws to a close.

New Holland Feeder Pig Auction

NEW HOLLAND, PA
September 18, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

FEEDER PIGS: WEDNESDAY 489, LAST WEEK 676, LAST YEAR 402.

Compared to last week, a light run of feeder pigs sold with a sharply lower undertone as many pig feeders remain extremely cautious in the face of a volatile slaughter hog market. Lighter weight 20-30 lb slaughter pigs sold mostly 13.00 lower, with 40-80 lb pigs trading fully steady to firm in fairly active trading. However, slaughter pigs weighing over 80 lbs were also pressured, trading with a definite weaker undertone. Receipts were nearly 200 head lighter this week when compared to last, as most producers are waiting for more market stability before bringing pigs to town. Around 12 percent of the run returned to feed. All pigs were weighed and graded on arrival and sold by the hundred weights.

Northeast Broiler Fryer Parts Part I

ATLANTA, GA.
September 19, 2002
Report Supplied By USDA

Trucklot buying activity remained light and unaggressive as dealers found little impetus to extend floor stocks beyond most immediate needs.

Offerings of breast items were ample with continued discounting noted.

Dark meat cuts were sufficient. Wings were adequate. Livers and gizzards were no more than adequate. Movement through retail and distributive channels was limited. The market tone was at least steady on dark meat cuts and wings, but barely steady to weak on breast items.

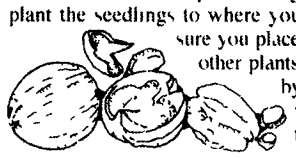
The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

SEPTEMBER 23–29, 2002

LAST QUARTER MOON, SEPT. 29

A-NUTTING, GO

With the autumnal equinox arriving on September 23, at 12:55 A.M. EST, it's time to gather fallen nuts. If you don't have a black walnut tree in your yard, search out a supply of these fine nuts to start your own grove. Take two or three good-looking nuts and place one each in a pot of good soil. Cover with squirrel proof wire mesh and set the pots in the ground. In spring, transplant the seedlings to where you want your grove. Be sure you place these trees away from other plants that would be harmed by the chemical juglone, which is released by the black walnut.



Already the dandelions are changed into vanishing ghosts.

–Celia Laighton Thaxter, American poet and gardener (1835–1894)

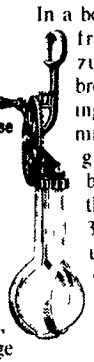
TIP OF THE WEEK

Dig up some parsley and chives for this winter's window-sill herb garden.

ZUCCHINI SAUSAGE SQUARES

12 ounces bulk pork sausage
3/4 cup finely chopped onion
2 cloves garlic, minced
4 large eggs
2 large zucchinis, grated
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/2 cup bread crumbs
1 teaspoon dried basil
1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon black pepper
1 cup grated sharp Cheddar cheese

Saute sausage, onion, and garlic until sausage is well done. Drain fat.



In a bowl, beat eggs until frothy, then stir in zucchini, Parmesan, bread crumbs, seasonings, and the sausage mixture. Pour into a greased 11x7 inch baking dish, smooth the top, and bake at 375°F for 25 minutes. Sprinkle grated Cheddar on top and bake for 15 minutes longer.

Makes 35 1-1/2-inch squares.

OPINION

Record-Breaking Event In Store At All-American

What supporters consider the largest dairy show in the world begins tomorrow as about 3,200 dairy cattle from 24 states and Canada will be entering the Farm Show Complex during the Pennsylvania All-American.

Agriculture Secretary Sam Hayes said, "The All-American Dairy Show is one of the great agricultural expositions in North America and a spectacular showcase for the dairy industry. Expositions like the All-American bring the very best of our dairy industry together."

The 3,198 entries represent an increase over the 3,077 entered in 2001. For the third straight year, premiums have increased to the tune of more than $160,000.

"The Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture wants the All-American Dairy Show to remain a leader in North America," Hayes said. "We recognize the importance of the dairy industry and want our dairy breeders in Pennsylvania and throughout North America to exhibit their superior dairy cattle at the All-American. And, we are pleased to provide increased financial resources for the dairy exposition."

More than $8,400 in premiums will be offered to recognize the high quality of dairy animals taking center stage during the youth classes in the Large Arena of the Farm Show Complex. This is the first year that premiums will be offered in all six youth breed shows.

"Our Pennsylvania-based All-American Dairy Show has enhanced premiums and world-class facilities which are setting the pace for international dairy shows. That's what should be done for the dairy industry of North America and we are glad to do it," Hayes said.

The All-American Dairy Show was started in 1963 to recognize the importance of genetic quality and excellent dairy cattle. The All-American Dairy Show takes pride in setting an exemplary standard of excellence on the national show circuit. The International Association of Fairs and Expositions (IAFE) has recognized the Pennsylvania-based dairy show as the Best Non-Fair Agricultural Event.

We hope to see you there!

Now Is The Time

To Maximize Forage Production

Results of a three-year study on forage systems by a Penn State beef cattle expert should help farmers save money on livestock feed and help protect them from the effects of drought.

During this sizzling summer, when a lack of rain and searing heat have parched much of Pennsylvania's agricultural landscape — resulting in crop losses approaching 100 percent in places — the findings are especially timely.

According to John Comerford, associate professor of dairy and animal science, many beef cattle farmers are out of grass because of the drought. "They are using feed stored for winter now," he said, "and they are facing the prospect of buying feed to get through the winter."

The results of Comerford's research represent a departure from tradition for many Pennsylvania farmers. "Historically, beef cattle farmers had fenced pastures and they just turned the cows out into them to graze," Comerford explained. "From our work with rotational grazing systems and pasture management, we know that is not the best way to use pasture."

Perhaps the biggest weakness with the old way of managing — or actually not managing — pastures and forage is that farmers are very dependent on weather. And in years like this one — when severe drought grips the state — the grass is mostly gone by mid-summer. Comerford's research shows farmers how to take advantage of growth periods and capture rainfall in ungrazed, uncut pastures.

"Normal grazing periods for continuous grazing systems in this region are 170 to 180 days," Comerford said. "But in very dry years such as this one, cows only can get their own feed for closer to 140 days."

Comerford's research, an evaluation of three grazing systems for beef cows, was carried out in two locations from 1996 to 1998, with 45 acres in each location. Cows were fed grasses (such as fescue, sudangrass, and orchardgrass), corn stalks, small grains and alfalfa — alone, and in various combinations.

"When we rely on one kind of grass for forage we are vulnerable to the weather because the growth of the grass is sensitive to rainfall," he said. "When we take advantage of different kinds of forage, such as legumes, corn and stockpiled grass, grazing becomes less sensitive to rainfall amounts.

"The study showed that beef cattle are not picky about the forage they graze," Comerford said. "There just has to be enough of it on a daily basis. The most cost-effective grazing system will have a combination of several types of forage, including cool season perennials, stockpiled grass, alfalfa-plus-grass pastures, and corn stalks."

Comerford had a good idea what any one of the forage varieties would offer farmers individually. "What we tried to do in this study, for the first time in this region to the best of my knowledge, was look at them in various combinations and look at the cost of each," he said. "What we have done is put a dollar value to forage, and that's not readily available elsewhere."

For more information about Comerford's research into the best mix of forage varieties, contact him at (814) 863-3661 or e-mail jxc16@psu.edu.

To Focus On Farm Safety

Dennis Murphy, a safety expert in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences, reports of the 34 people who died on Pennsylvania farms in 2001, eight were children age 9 and under. 'Even one fatal farm accident involving a child is too many," said Murphy, "The number of fatalities has been pretty stable the past few years, but last year the number of fatal accidents involving young children was sharply higher."

In 2000, 32 people died in Pennsylvania farm accidents, compared to 30 in 1999, 45 in 1998, 45 in 1997, and 44 in 1996. "The trend has been toward fewer fatal accidents until the number of fatalities rose slightly the past two years," said Murphy. "Changes in statistics year to year are difficult to attribute to any one cause.

"In the last few decades, as the number of people working on farms has dropped, equipment has become safer and safety education has become more readily available to farmers, the number of fatal accidents has dropped dramatically. By far the most common fatal accidents on Pennsylvania farms involve tractors — nine people died in tractor-related accidents in 2001.

"2001 was a particularly bad year for very young children on the farmstead," Murphy said. "It points out that parents can never let down their guard or relax in protecting their children on the farm. It's hard to understand because there are more youth farm-safety programs than ever. Six of the fatal accidents involved children age 4 and under, and kids that young normally aren't working."

Ten of the 34 deaths last year on Pennsylvania farms involved people age 65 to 79. But that's not unusual, according to Murphy. "Farmers often don't retire — they just keep working as long as they can," he said. "Other industries don't have those older age groups working, so fatal accidents among seniors is mostly peculiar to agriculture." Some months are more dangerous than others working on the farm — the months when most work is done. In 2001, six people died in June, five in July, and five in September.

ON FOLLOWING THE LEADER

Background Scripture:
2 Chronicles 34 through 35; 2 Kings 22 through 23.
Devotional Reading:
Psalms 199:1-8.

The president of Vassar once wrote to the father of a girl who was applying for admission: "Is she a good leader?"

"I am not sure about this," the father replied, "but I know she is an excellent follower."

Back came a surprising reply: "As our freshman class next fall is to contain several hundred leaders, we congratulate ourselves that your daughter will be a member of the class. We shall be thus assured of one good follower."

The world, like Vassar College, needs both good leaders and good followers. Leaders get started what other people only dream about. Often, instead of whining, "Why doesn't do something about it?" they say, "Let's go! We can do this."

King Josiah was such a man. He is generally regarded as Judah's greatest king, as well as its last good king. He ascended the throne at the age of eight, when his father, Amon was murdered, and reigned 31 years before his untimely death in battle at the age of 39. He was only 20 when he began his great reform movement, purging Jerusalem and Judah of pagan sites of worship and restoring the temple that had lain in disrepair.

Not In His Genes

What was the source of his remarkable ability to lead Judah to do what others had only contemplated? The answer was probably not in the genes he inherited. Although his great-great-great-great-grandfather Hezekiah had attempted reforms, these did not outlast the ruinous reigns of his grandfather Manasseh and his father Amon. Neither does it appear that he passed any leadership genes to his son, Jehoahaz, who, becoming king upon Josiah's death, was judged as had most of his forbears been judged: "He did what evil in the sight of the Lord his God" (36:5).

The chroniclers do not tell us much. They don't tell us if he was a brilliant thinker or stirring speaker, nor do they hint at charismatic gifts or an impressive stature. Rather, they focus on what he did, observing that "He did what was right in the eyes of the Lord, and walked in the ways of David his father; and he did not turn aside to the right or to the left" (34:2). He was an earnest seeker after God and this search directed the way he lived and ruled. Often, that commitment is the cradle of true leadership.

The chroniclers also show us that he backed up his dreams with an unfailing will. Josiah's reform succeeded because of his single-minded will to do the job that must be done. Although it was Hilkiah the Levite who actually found the lost scroll in a forgotten corner of the temple, it was because of Josiah's will to restore the temple that Hilkiah was there to find it. It was also because of Josiah that the scrolls of Deuteronomic law were brought to the people and the ancient covenant with God publicly renewed.

Josiah The Healer

He was aptly named, for Josiah may be translated either as "Yahweh (God) cures" or "Yahweh (God) gives," and Josiah both healed his nation and gave it back its priceless spiritual heritage. Unlike many political leaders, when faced with the scroll's obvious judgment upon the previous generations on Judah in general and his royal family line in particular, Josiah did not choose to defend his predecessors, but confessed: " . . . for great is the wrath of the Lord that is poured out on us, because our father have not kept the word of the Lord, to do according to all that is written in this book" (34:21).

Yet, for all of his dedication and will, Josiah's reforms hardly survived him. Upon his death, much of the momentum was quickly lost. Does that mean that his leadership was flawed? Perhaps the answer is to be found, not in his leadership, but in the following of his people. Under the force of his will, his people followed his lead, but when he was gone, many lapsed back to what they had been and done before Josiah.

One person can get a reform going, but it takes stalwart, dedicated followers to keep it going.

"Bio-Zyme w/ Miracle II" Meetings

This is again announcing some upcoming meetings in the Dauphin and Lancaster County areas Please see last week's publication for dates, times and locations

What are Bio-Zyme products?

They are soil inoculants with the added power of enzyme and humus (organic matter) to increase root growth and mass seed germination and emergence by reducing soil crusting Also contains Seaweed growth hormones from soybeans, Miracle II Soap and Neutralizer and more

How do the Soil Inoculants work?

The living soil micro-organisms and other organic substances in it ACCELERATE and ENCOURAGE the natural activities of micro-organisms or bacteria already present in the soil Bio-Zyme Soil Inoculants are soil treatments to help reduce soil compaction and erosion

The definitions of INOCULATE in Webster s Dictionary (1) To put bacteria, serums, etc into Farmers inoculate the soil with bacteria that will take nitrogen from the air and change it so it can be used by plants (2) To infect with germs that will cause a mild form of a disease to prevent it from getting the regular disease

Why were the Miracle II products added?

Stan & A.C had been researching and experimenting for years with various products, especially enzymes, to improve soil conditions They finally came up with an organic product which they named Bio-Zyme Soil Inoculants Then about 1 1/2 years ago they found out about the Miracle II products and used them along with the Bio-Zymes with tremendous results They then decided to re-formulate the product by adding the Miracle II Soap and Neutralizer because through their experiences they found out that each product enhanced the other one

The Soap and Neutralizer possess moisture retention agents that help to improve soil condition, increase water penetration and reduce moisture stress This allows for increased crop production through better water utilization and plant nutrition Also very helpful in hydrophobic types of soils to aid in holding water and aids in balancing the PH factor of your soil

Are these the only fertilizers you will need?

Not in all soil conditions When using the Soil Inoculants you can use less of your favorite fertilizer - approx 25% less if in liquid form and 50% less if in granular form

What is Bio-Zyme Soil Inoculant w/ 20-20-20 Fertilizer?

All the advantages of the soil inoculants but formulated with NPK to increase crop yields through improved fertilizer utilization Only for those who feel they need the extra NPK Environmentally friendly with an organic base

Just remember

Bio-Zyme Soil Inoculants and other organic substances help bring back microbial life in the soil Microbial life in the soil is EXTREMELY IMPORTANT! They are a large part of the soil and work to clean up the soil as well as making NPK and other nutrients available to plant life

On the other hand, Anhydrous Ammonia and other chemicals (which Stan & A C were big users of at one time) are destructive and are killing the microbial life in the soil Which will we choose? Let s determine to help bring back the LIFE in the soil rather than destroy it!

Sept. 13, 2002
MARKETS NEUTRAL

- Prices at CME steady; more news to come next week.
- Futures markets look ugly.
- International markets weak also.

Cheese and butter markets in Chicago were relatively stable this week. Cheese ended the week just under support price levels. Barrels fell 2.23 cents per pound this week, and blocks fell 1.84 cents per pound. Butter markets were also weak, but remained steady at $0.9333 per pound.

The market is anticipating two very important reports that are due out next week. The milk production report will come out on Tuesday, Sept. 17. Of particular interest will be whether cow numbers in August grew, stabilized, or fell in relation to July numbers. While cow numbers have been growing since April, I am expecting (hoping) they will level off.

The other big report to come out will be cold storage, which is due Friday, Sept. 20. This report measures stocks of butter and cheese. It also implies what consumption has done. I'll be looking to see whether or not consumption of dairy products is on the mend.

The futures markets do not look promising for dairy profitability. The Class III futures as of Sept. 13 are expected to rise from $9.81 per CWT in September to just $10.80 per CWT by December. Class IV futures are relatively flat, rising from $10.40 per CWT in September to $10.55 by December. And grain futures show feed prices will rise over the next few months.

December corn futures at the Chicago Board of Trade rose from $2.40 per bushel in July to $2.90 in recent days. Likewise, January 2003 soybean meal futures rose from $170 per ton in July to more than $185 per ton in recent days.

In other news, Australia and New Zealand are entering a new milk producing season. Moisture is lacking in Australia. That said, overall output is running 5 percent ahead of a year ago. USDA reports that butter prices in that part of the world are steady to firm, holding at 46.5 cents per pound. Skim milk powder, otherwise know as nonfat dry milk in the U.S., is also unchanged at 55.6 cents per pound.

Average Farm Feed Costs for Handy Reference

To help farmers across the state to have handy reference of commodity input costs in their feeding operations for DHIA record sheets or to develop livestock feed cost data, here's last week's average costs of various ingredients as compiled from regional reports across the state of Pennsylvania.

Remember, these are averages, so you will need to adjust your figures up or down according to your location and the quality of your crop.

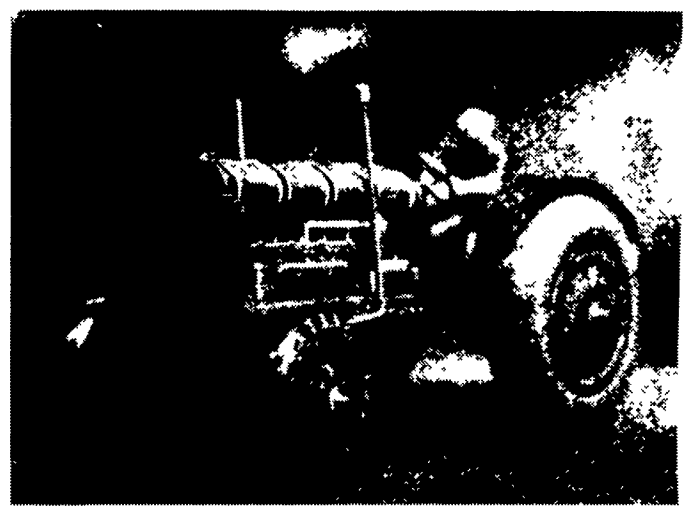
SOMETIMES PLACING VALUE ON SOMETHING TODAY,

MAKES IT MORE VALUABLE TOMORROW.



Take cattle supplements. Some cattlemen are guilty of waiting too long to supplement their cattle. They wait until their pastures are gone or cattle begin to lose body condition. The simple truth is it's more expensive to feed cattle to gain weight back than it is to maintain their body condition. Spending a little time and money now can make a big difference in the calving and breeding seasons. Enter PRO-LIX® liquid supplements. You know the name, but did you know that PRO-LIX gives you the most nutrition for your dollar? Providing your herd with proven performance and you a labor-saving feeding solution. PRO-LIX liquid supplements are actually priced delivered and fed to your herd. If you're looking for a cost-effective supplement to help increase your bottom line, isn't it obvious which product to look for?

Call 1.800.844.7521 to find out how easy it is to get PRO-LIX in your feeders.

Start Clean Next Spring with Fall Sprays

If weather delays next springs burndown applications you could wind up with some real weed-control headaches in your Roundup Ready soybean fields That's where a well-planned timely fall herbicide application can help

Fall applications provide early burndown of actively growing weeds plus residual weed control to help you plant into clean fields next spring just like spring burndowns do But with a fall application your fields will dry down faster for earlier planting and insects may be fewer due to less weed vegetation Populations of soybean cyst nematode may also be reduced

Fall applications of Python WDG herbicide at 0 8 to 1 0 ounce 1 pint of 2 4-D and 1 pint of Glyphomax Plus herbicide per acre control tough weeds like purple deadnettle and henbit, plus common chickweed mustard shepherdspurse butterweed field pennycress yellow rocket wild mustards and early flushes of lambsquarters

Make your fall application when soil temperatures have dropped to 50 degrees F and are continuing to fall This will help Python WDG remain stable in the soil until it activates next spring

One more benefit that Python WDG provides is the flexibility to plant corn if market or weather conditions dictate a change Canopy XL herbicide restricts growers to soybeans

When next spring arrives you can use one 32-ounce post application of Glyphomax Plus to clean up any remaining weeds in your Roundup Ready soybeans Or you can tank-mix 0 3 ounces of FirstRate* herbicide with reduced rates of Glyphomax Plus if common and giant ragweed, cocklebur, sunflowers or velvetleaf are a common weed problem in your fields

For more information about using Python WDG and Glyphomax Plus herbicides in a fall-applied program, contact your local ag retailer

Farm Show 2003 Exhibitor Spotlight

Exclusive to Lancaster Farming

ELIZABETHTOWN (Lancaster Co.) — Messick's Farm Equipment, a dealer for more than 200 brands of equipment for agriculture, lawn and garden and light industrial areas, is returning full-strength to the Farm Show.

Although Jay Gainer, general manager, is reserving final judgment until after this year's Farm Show, he believes the future of the event looks bright.

"I think that the farmers would prefer to go there (Farm Show) rather than anywhere else," he said, noting that with everything from corn to livestock to quilt to FFA displays, "there's something for everybody. That's what people want."

He is optimistic about the changes at the Farm Show. "We think what they're doing is valuable and will work," he said.

The business part will be fully staffed — five employees in the 50-foot by 50-foot section — during the specified Farmer Days. Staff will be available, although at smaller numbers, throughout the entire eight-day show.

The large new exhibition hall will hold the equipment displays. "We got in early and told them we wanted big," he said of the size of the display area.

For the past ten years, the business' presence at the Farm Show has been a booth display, according to Gainer. Besides the larger area, the employees of Messicks will also, along with other dealers, staff a booth for compact tractors.

"It will take quite a commitment," said Gainer. Although advertising and public relations are a part of why Messick's the business presence at the Farm Show, "most farmers already know us. There's a growing segment of 15-20 acre farmers and that's where I think we gain the most from a show like this," he said.

Besides introducing the business to hobby farmers, Gainer is also anticipating displaying a new line this year, the Newton Crouch stainless steel lime and fertilizer spreaders. "It's a wonderful place to introduce to people a new line," he said.

Messick's Farm Equipment, one of the biggest New Holland dealers in the United States, is on the verge of celebrating its fiftieth anniversary of business.

Two brothers, Marlin and Merville Messick, erected a building in Elizabethtown on November 26, 1952. The business' current 21-acre site in Elizabethtown is joined by a second facility in Abbottstown, York County.

Bob and Ken Messick, sons of Merville Messick, operate the business. Seventy-two employees — in service, parts, and sales departments — work in the business.

Messick's has a large customer base in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Delaware, and Virginia, but also has customers in such states as Ohio, Connecticut, Maine, Massachusetts, and South Carolina.

In the 25 years that Gainer has worked at Messick's Farm Equipment, the number of employees has risen from 10 to 72 employees. Two components to the business that Gainer believes make the business successful are the outside parts delivery salesmen and the fully-equipped service trucks for on-farm repair.

York Fair Hosts Full Slate Of Sheep Shows

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — The York Fair recently hosted several days of sheep show action, including junior and open breed shows attracting sheep of all varieties.

In the open breeding show, supreme champion wool ewe honors went to Butch Carpenter, Jefferson, Maryland. His ewe first took first place in the 1-year and under 2-year-old class. Brian and Doris Snyder, Reading, took home supreme champion wool ram with their spring ram lamb.

In a showdown between the Cheviot, Hampshire, and Southdown rams — the three sheep that judge Tim Hall picked out of a championship drive of meat breeds — a homebred Hampshire owned by RJR Hampshires got the nod for supreme champion ram of the meat breeds at York Fair's open breeding sheep show.

Dick, Becky, and son Jay Rishel, Seven Valleys, raised Elwood on their 17-acre farm of 40 head of sheep.

The ram was also champion at the Maryland State Fair. A twin brother of the animal has also garnered good show placings, according to the Rishels, who are deciding which of the two rams to keep on the farm. Jay Rishel started raising Hampshires in 1995, and the family has built the flock from those beginnings.

Besides the York and Maryland State Fairs, the family exhibits sheep at Keystone International Livestock Exposition (KILE) and the national Hampshire show at the North American International Livestock Exposition (NAILE). They also sell lambs to 4-H'ers, mainly as breeding sheep projecs.

"We're interested in helping kids get started in that respect," said Dick Rishel. Watching their animals shown in the ring by young exhibitors is interesting and fun, according to Becky.

In the ewe show of the meat breeds, Jen Flinchbaugh's Southdown exhibited the best pattern, style, and productivity potential for a ewe, according to judge Hall, who named the ewe supreme champion.

Flinchbaugh, 21, a senior at Penn State, has been showing sheep for 16 years and has shown cattle and hogs in the past. Her homebred, "Sheila," is part of a 30-head flock that includes Southdown and crossbred sheep.

She is the daughter of Ed and Lou Ann Keeny, York, and is studying animal science at the university. She plans to move on to law school to study agriculture law. The Farm Show, KILE, and Maryland State Fair are other shows on Flinchbaugh's circuit.

Tim Hall, Dalmatia, Northumberland County, judged the breeding show of the meat breeds. Hall works as a flock consultant for Lauden Acres Dorsets, a 150-brood ewe operation.

(Turn to Page A25)

Jen Flinchbaugh, York, and homebred Southdown "Sheila" took home supreme champion ewe placing at York Fair's open breeding sheep show. She is joined by her father, Ed Keeny.

Travis Flory, Red Lion, won supreme champion ewe placing at York Fair's junior breeding sheep show. He is joined by Krissy Stem, Fawn Grove.

Travis, 17, a junior at York County School of Technology, has been exhibiting sheep in 4-H for nine years but has been exhibiting sheep in open shows since he was four years old. He was also named champion showman in the junior show judged by Dr. Robert Herr, Narvon.

Travis is from TNT Suffolks, 18 acres and additional rented pature that has 50 head of mostly Suffolk sheep. However the farm also has Travis' sister Tasha's Southdown sheep. At the York Fair Tasha had the champion Southdown ewe in junior competition.

They are the children of Tom and Josie Flory. Besides York Fair, the family exhibits animals at the Maryland State Fair and Farm Show.

They brought 20 head of sheep and 10 head of market hogs, and 34 chickens and ducks to the fair, also taking home several champion designations in the poultry show, including the best of show placing with a goose.

Jerseys Sweep 4-H, Open Shows Tuesday At Gratz Fair

ANDY ANDREWS
Editor

GRATZ (Dauphin Co.) — Two Jerseys captured the Gratz Fair Dairy Show spotlight Tuesday evening, winning supreme champion in the 4-H and open shows.

Open show champion went to an 8-year-old Jersey owned by Harold and Shirley Harpster, Boalsburg. Youth show champion went to a Jersey exhibited by Greg McMurtrie.

The supreme 4-H Jersey cow is a "tremendously framed cow," noted show judge Eric Stine, Pennsylvania Furnace, who maintains a herd of Holsteins. Stine noted the cow had a "tremendous mammary." The open show Jersey has a "beautiful frame, with good set of feet and legs and good udder, a tremendous cow all the way through," he said.

In the Holstein show, the largest of the breeds at the fair, Stine selected a 3-year-old shown by Grant Campbell as champion.

39th All-American Dairy Show Set To Break Records, Again

Pennsylvania-based dairy show is another increase in premiums for the third straight year. More than $160,000 will be offered in premiums at the 2002 All-American. Each entry will receive a cash award.

"The All-American Dairy Show is one of the great agricultural expositions in North America and a spectacular showcase for the dairy industry," said Secretary of Agriculture Sam Hayes. "Expositions like the All-American bring the very best of our dairy industry together."

For the first time at the All-American Dairy Show, a supreme champion will be selected from the youth show. The winning youth will receive a cash premium of $2,000.

To help youth exhibitors invest in their future, each youth breed grand champion will also receive a $1,000 savings bond for their achievement.

"The future of America's dairy industry rests in the hands of today's young men and women," Hayes said. "Everyday, talented young people work with their dairy herds, gaining hands-on experience in dairy genetics, striving to breed high-quality show cattle, learning responsibility, and demonstrating good showmanship. The All-American Dairy Show strives to recognize their importance."

More than $8,400 in premiums will be offered to recognize the high quality of dairy animals taking center stage during the youth classes in the Large Arena of the Farm Show Complex. This is the first year that premiums will be offered in all six youth breed shows.

To better serve agricultural expositions such as the All-American, the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture initiated a $86 million investment in a landmark construction project at its Farm Show Complex. The new construction and upgrades are scheduled to be completed in December.

However, because the cattle numbers are up over last year's record, some of the new space will be used for the All-American Dairy Show.

The All-American Dairy Show was started in 1963 to recognize the importance of genetic quality and excellent dairy cattle. At this time in its history, the All-American Dairy Show takes pride in setting an exemplary standard of excellence on the national show circuit. The Pennsylvania-based dairy show has been recognized by the International Association of Fairs and Expositions (IAFE) as the best non-fair agricultural event.

Over the span of five days, eight state, regional, and national dairy shows will be conducted. The All-American will culminate on Sept. 26 with the parade of breed champions in the Large Arena and the selection of the supreme champion.

The definition given to the All-American Dairy Show Image Award winner is "An individual who has enhanced the image of the All-American Dairy Show by significant contributions towards its reputation, prestige, and welfare."

Secretary Hayes positively fits the definition of an All-American Image Award Winner.

Among the goals Sam Hayes set for himself when he accepted his appointment as secretary of agriculture was to make the All-American Dairy Show the "premier show" in all of North America.

Hayes thought that improving the Farm Show Complex would in turn enhance the quality of the show and increase the entries. By obtaining additional money for advertising, funding for staff to coordinate the show, and additional dollars for premiums, he aimed to greatly improve the show's reputation.

The opportunity existed to promote the dairy cattle and genetics of Pennsylvania as well as to invite fellow breeders and exhibitors from all over North America, and the world.

The All-American Dairy Show, conducted under one roof at the Farm Show Complex, will continue to be the top dairy show offered in North America.

Much of the credit for the show's recent renewal belongs to Hayes. In 1995, he was instrumental in obtaining additional dollars to bring show funding to more than $100,000. By 2001, he had increased this funding to $237,000. Hayes believed if Pennsylvania could make this the top dairy show in the world, exhibitors would come. His emphasis was on premium dollars, hospitality, making the show exhibitor-friendly, and insuring livestock safety.

Hayes Named Acting Secretary Of Legislative Affairs

tration needs as we focus on the work ahead of us in the coming months," Schweiker said. "We expect a productive fall session when the General Assembly returns. Sam will make sure this administration's legislative agenda will continue to move forward successfully."

Hayes will also continue to serve as agriculture secretary in the meantime.

"As a gesture of goodwill toward the Legislature, plus hopes for a spirited and engaged fall legislative season, Governor Schweiker asked me to be the secretary for legislative affairs in addition to being the secretary of agriculture," Hayes noted. "We are approaching the last two months of this session of the General Assembly, which ends Nov. 30. Governor Schweiker wants there to be a good working relationship with senators and representatives."

Hayes calls the legislative sessions a "sprint, a dash, and the equivalent of a two-minute drill in professional football," he noted. "They are intense and they are white hot and there are tremendous pressures. There are constitutional differences between the executive branch and legislative branch, and there is a whole host of other considerations coming into play at this time in the legislative session. And, you have the private sector interacting with this whole public policy process. It is a very cluttered landscape. What is done and what isn't done are both very important.

"There needs to be a helmsman helping with the relationships and the process. I have been a lawmaker and legislative leader in the legislative branch. Now I serve in the executive branch as the secretary of agriculture. And I interact with citizens and their organizations on a daily basis. So, I have been asked to help.

"For this critical period, until the legislative session ends on Nov. 30, I will be both the secretary of agriculture and secretary of legislative affairs. This is a 'first-time-ever situation,' with one person doing both. I have the Department of Agriculture organized for a very productive fall season."

Hayes noted that he loves "my agriculture team. We are ready. For sure, we will get it done. And I'm looking forward to being once again engaged in the legislative process."

	CATTLE	CALVES
THIS WEEK	2390	1664
LAST WEEK	2360	1740
LAST YEAR	2697	1697

Compared to last week, slaughter steers began the week trading steady to weak, only to trade .50-1.00 higher to end the trading period. Holstein steers followed the same pattern, kicking off the week with a weaker undertone, trading with a firmer undertone late in the week on improved quality. A slaughter heifer trend was not established due to low receipts. Slaughter cows sold .50- 1.00 lower early in the week; however losses were recouped late in the week as cows sold .50-1.00 higher. Slaughter bulls sold mostly steady to instances 1.00 higher on fairly good runs. The slaughter steer supply this week ranged from plain to fancy, with bidding relatively active on all types. Both Tuesday's and Thursday's supply included some very high quality stock, where bidding was very active as buyers fought to own them. Leaner type cows continue to flood the cow markets; fortunately demand is as good as the supply, as bidding is still fairly active. The direct feedyards are lined up to put another dollar on their finished cattle this week. Early sales in the Southern Plains show steers and heifers trading 1.00 higher at 67.00. Dressed sales were not established as of Friday morning, although early sales indicate a firmer undertone. Cattle producers are starting to get some spring back in their step as the current market seems to have some positive outlook for the future. Boxed beef values continue to be on the rise, with live cattle futures at the CME in and out of the 70 dollar range all week. This weeks supply included 36 percent stters, 4 percent heifers, 39 percent cows, 9 percent bulls, with the balance feeders.

Along with recognizing class winners in both the open and youth show, the association will be announcing the 2002 All-Pennsylvania winners, based on placings from the spring show, regional shows, and the fall show.

Two additional highlights at the fall show will be the selection of the 2002 Keystone Futurity winner. There are 42 animals eligible to show that were entered as heifers with payments made as the animals matured. The Futurity class has the winner receiving a check for more than $925 in prize money.

The association will also select the George M. Knight Jr. Total Performance Award winner. This award is based on the cow's production and show ring placing. The award is presented by the Knight Family in honor of Knight's dedication to the show ring.

Holstein Members To Raise Funds

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The Pennsylvania Junior Holstein Association will be selling toasted cheese sandwiches again this year at the All-American Dairy Show.

The booth will be located in the Dairy Activities Center near the dairy antique show. The Junior Association uses this as a fund-raiser and also as a food service to the exhibitors and spectators attending the show.

The sandwiches sell for $1 each. The Pennsylvania Holstein Association will also be selling calf raffle tickets at the All-American to again generate funds to support junior members and their activities across the state. Paul and Ellen Hartle, Mammoth Spring Farms, Centre County have generously donated a March 2002 heifer calf to the association for the calf raffle. The calf is sired by Mr. America, an EX-90 Storm son from Paul's famous EX-94 Miss America cow. The dam and grandam of the calf both have high production records.

Raffle tickets will be available for purchase at the toasted cheese sandwich booth as well.

Moyers Receive Century Farm Honor

Novice Wins Big At Solanco Sheep Show

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — "Beginner's luck," 10-year-old Miriam Henry said of capturing the grand champion market lamb title in her first year of showing.

Chet Hughes, Lancaster 4-H livestock agent, disagreed with Miriam's modest assessment. He told her, "It's a great sheep, and you did a good job in raising it."

Of the 62 sheep shown by 36 exhibitors at the Solanco Fair on Wednesday, Miriam's sheep was most impressive, according to Scott Wright, sheep judge. "It's a nice complete lamb — powerful, plenty of thickness, and handled well over the ribs."

Miriam, the daughter of Tom and Martha Henry of Holtwood, said the lamb was purchased from Fleeners of Robesonia.

"Peter is a really friendly lamb. I walk him a mile a day, but he doesn't like me to lead him. He always wants to be first," she said of Peter's rambunctious antics in the ring.

The reserve grand champion market lamb was a heavyweight shown by Kelsey Binkley, 12. The same lamb, purchased from G&G Lambs, had been selected grand champion at the 4-H roundup.

Although the lamb carries the name "Four-Wheel Drive," he is very docile.

"He is very tame. He'll just lay his head on my leg and stay still," Kelsey said. "He learned to know me very well, because I feed him twice a day, and run, walk, and set him up every day."

Kelsey, the daughter of Van and Beth Binkley, Conestoga, said the family raises 52 sheep, made up of Dorset and Suffolk breeds.

When her lamb is sold at the Solanco Sale, Kelsey said she will shed some tears.

"I'll be sad, but this is my fourth year in showing. It isn't as bad as it used to be, because I know selling them is just part of it," Kelsey said.

IMPROVING THE FAMILY FARM

Roland P. Freund
Regional Farm Management Agent

The single family farmer today is something like a one-person band, attempting to play all the instruments at once and still maintain a steady beat. Things get pretty hectic at times, some beats get skipped, and many notes are missed. The stress on the player is often severe, and many sour notes result.

Much has changed in the past 50 years to stress the family farmer. Groups of farmers used to combine equipment and labor resources to fill silo, thrash grain, slaughter and process hogs or cattle, and make apple butter. Facilities were generally low investment then, and labor efficiency was less critical to farm profitability.

Farmers today have become far more independent: attempting to control more of their own production processes. Each of them has invested more money in equipment and facilities — which they use for less hours per year than their grandparents did. The result is that payments on facilities, machinery, and equipment are crippling many a struggling small family farm.

Roland P. Freund

Options which family farmers face under these conditions are to sell out, expand the business, specialize, or cooperate. Let's look at the last two options and, using dairy examples, see what a family might consider.

Specialization would enable a family farm to be more focused, but still be an independent operation.

• Milk cows. Analysis of dairy farm businesses in Pennsylvania has shown that more than 40 percent of dairy operations could buy their feed cheaper than they produce it. This suggests that such operations should concentrate on milking cows and let others grow the crops for them. If they sell their field equipment, they can reinvest that capital in larger and better facilities and concentrate on what they do best.

• Grow feed. The same studies showed that about 40 percent of our dairies could have sold the feed they produced for cash and been more profitable than dairying. One such farmer could grow feed on his own and two other farms and supply the needs of those two expanded operations. He could do a better job of producing quality feed than the three did independently.

• Raise replacements. This is a popular form of specialization for elderly dairymen who still want to work with animals. To be financially successful, these farmers need to concentrate investment on baby calf facilities, minimize investment for older groups, observe careful biosecurity, and turn out several hundred head per year.

• Cooperate — two-family operation. It has been suggested that two families could combine resources to operate a 300-cow dairy with a low-cost, labor-efficient parlor. Fieldwork does not have to stop to get the milking chores done, and each family can schedule weekends and vacations away from the farm.

• Multifamily farm. There are many ways that a group of farmers could combine to form a business in which each of them can be owners and managers. In dairying, the key is to get the return on a large parlor through high use and labor efficiency. The group might own the parlor, but individuals could each own a milk tank and a barn where they house their own cows. This arrangement might create more problems than it solves.

A better model might be one which is operated as a single business. Each family contributes capital to construct the total facility and furnish the cows. They might lease their land and equipment to the business and provide labor and management. The business could pay each member wages for labor and management, lease payments, and profit distributions based on their investment in the business.

• Business arrangements. Each of these options requires at least an operating agreement. The cooperative ventures also require the formation of business entities and some complex legal agreements. These will be the topic for another article in this series.

Reasners: 'We Show Our Milk Cows And Milk Our Show Cows'

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Michelle Reasner and her husband, Jeff, milk their show cows and the rest of the JEMI herd on their farm in Newburg, Cumberland County.

While Jeff is kept busy working as an independent representative for Taurus, Inc. and Semex, Inc., Michelle cares for the herd. To meet the nutritional needs of the purebred Ayrshires, Jerseys, and several Holsteins, the cows spend most of their day grazing the different paddocks of the farm. During the summer and winter months, supplemental feed and forages are used. The JEMI herd is milked in a 67-stall barn twice per day and the rolling herd average is 16,500 pounds of milk, 5 percent fat, and 3.9 percent protein.

A walk into the farm office is like taking a tour of show awards and prizes. Banners, trophies, chairs, and many other awards are displayed. Michelle began showing cattle many years ago and has exhibited at the All-American Dairy Show for more than 15 years. Although the JEMI show string consists mainly of Ayrshires and Jerseys, a few Holsteins have also been known to sneak on the trailer and make trips to shows.

Michelle and Jeff's farm slogan is, "We Show Our Milk Cows And Milk Our Show Cows." This successful farm brings out many different animals and can be seen at numerous shows during the season.

Even with her busy schedule, Michelle still finds time to go "antiquing" and shares this love with her father, Darwin Braund. A visit to the farmhouse is quite a treat for any dairy antique collector. Some of the items were given to Michelle and Jeff and some were purchased on antique outings or visits to collectible shows.

One of the favorites is a Penn Gate Dairy quart milk bottle given to Michelle by the original owner of the door-to-door milk delivery business, Bob Gitt of Littlestown, Adams County. A rare pair of model Jersey cows are also very high on Michelle's list of favorites. Imported from Beswick, England, the pair was rescued by father, Darwin at a flea market where the previous owner was going to throw them away. A one-quart steel butter churn adorns one of the shelves of collectibles.

The Reasners display a Davis Swing Churn in their living room. It was the smallest of the six different sizes offered by the Vermont Farm Machinery Company of Bellows Falls, Vermont and is dated May 1; 1877.

One of the items Michelle will display at the Dairy Antique and Collectible Show at All-American is a gallon milk bottle used by the Singing Brook Farm during their bottling and delivery business. Obie Snider, president of the All-American board of directors, owned and operated this bottling business from the family farm in Imler. Butter churns, other milk bottles and selected collectibles will also be displayed by the Reasners at the show.

Many unique and rare items will be on display and/or offered for sale at the All-American Dairy Antique and Collectibles Show, which will be conducted Sept. 21-25 as a part of the All-American Dairy Show Week at the Farm Show Complex. For more information, contact Dr. Darwin Braund at (814) 863-1383.

York Fair's Best Doe Honor Goes To 5-Year Old Homebred

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — "Cream Puff" came to the top of a breeding goat show of approximately 65 head at the recent York Fair. The 5-year-old animal has been named best in show twice this year at other fairs.

The homebred Recorded Grade goat, whose mother was a Nubian and father a LaMancha goat, is from the Millerstown Farm, Land of Pure Delight Dairy Goats, owned and operated by Janet Sowers and Mary Wright.

On the farm is about 60 head of goats, which they began raising and showing 11 or 12 years ago, they estimate. They are milking 23 head and brought 20 head to exhibit at the fair.

Besides the York Fair, they exhibit in several fairs in New Jersey, Maryland, and Pennsylvania — they have attended six shows already this year.

Five Colored Breeds Shown At Solanco

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

QUARRYVILLE (Lancaster Co.) — Ayrshires appeared in the largest numbers at the Southern Lancaster County Fair's Colored Breeds Dairy Show here Wednesday, followed by the Brown Swiss, Milking Shorthorn, Lineback, and Jersey breeds.

Judge Ronald Ray Daubert named a cow exhibited by Susan Richardson as the grand champion Ayrshire. Four-year-old Fawn Valley Soldier Harmony was one of five Ayrshires Richardson brought to the show.

"I love the balance of this cow," Daubert said. He also noted the "nice, neat mammary system" displayed by the champion Ayrshire.

Richardson, of Fawn Grove in York County, is in her second year as a dairy herd management major at the University of Wisconsin in Madison. She has her sights set on becoming a dairy herdsperson in the Midwest.

Rebecca Baily, Chester County, exhibited two grand champions — in the Brown Swiss and Lineback shows. Baily is a member of the Chester Valley 4-H Club and a freshman at Unionville High School. She owns a total of about 20 dairy animals on the home farm, including a majority of Linebacks, but also Brown Swiss, Jerseys, and Holsteins.

The Milking Shorthorn show was dominated by the Crowl family of Airville, York County. Animals owned by Heather Crowl, in her final year as an FFA member, swept both junior and senior champion and reserve categories. The grand champion Milking Shorthorn cow, a 6-year-old, was exhibited by Heather's father, Ellis Crowl.

A 3-year-old Jersey owned by Stormi Greek and exhibited by Lisa Jones, Delta, York County, was named Jersey grand champion.

Daubert called the following results:

Dandie says...

PUT MILK IN THE TANK WITH

High Energy Grasses

High grain diets are hard on your herd's health. Reduce high grain feeding without sacrificing milk production with our high energy grasses.

Ryegrass and festulolium energy levels are often as good or better than corn silage. Combine this energy (high sugar) with protein levels in the low 20s or higher and you have a milk maker. Best for grazing and balage.

1 & 2yr. RYEGRASSES

Annual InstaGold

Italian Zorro & Green Spirit

PERENNIAL RYEGRASSES

Plant on your farm's best soils for top production.

TIVOLI
A high sugar late heading tetraploid variety. You can taste the sugars. Seed alone or with alfalfa and/or clovers to improve summer production.

MARA
A tough diploid ryegrass. Mara was bred in Romania and survives harsh summers and winters very well. It is excellent for grazing.

BG 34
A popular blend of three diploid ryegrasses primarily recommended for pasture. 30% of the mix is Mara.

SUGAR DATA	% Water Soluable Carbohydrates (Sugar)
Perun Festulolium (highest in trial)	21.4
Perennial Ryegrass (average)	19.4
Tall Fescue	8.4
Orchardgrass	6.2

FESTULOLIUMS

Our varieties are new releases with a breeding emphasis on high sugars and reduced summer heading. They look and taste like ryegrass but take the summer heat and harsh winters better. Can be planted alone or in combination with alfalfa and/or clovers.

PERUN
An "Italian-type" tetraploid that will give 3 years of high production. Highest yielding variety among 20 entries in 2001 trials (MI St.) with over 8 tons of dry matter /acre. Also highest rated for palatability.

LOFA
A perennial type bred for 5 years of production. It looks very promising in trials. Sweet tasting and bright green.

FARM TIRES
THE LEADER IN THE FIELD

This photograph shows the richness of Chester County's agriculture. Commodity groups worked with the Chester County Agricultural Development Council to publish a cookbook showcasing the variety of fruits and vegetables grown in the county. Commodities include mushrooms, dairy, eggs, grains, meat, fish, poultry, vegetables, herbs, fruit, and wine. According to Joyce Hershey, who co-edited the cookbook, the purpose of the cookbook is to show countians that agriculture is the backbone of the county, and the best way to keep open spaces and fields is to keep farming successful.

Cookbook Showcases Chester County Bounty

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — Cookbooks are published for many different reasons, but the recently released "Bounty of Chester County, Heritage Edition," is intended to help keep agriculture thriving in Chester County.

"Agriculture is the backbone of our county. People move here because they like the green open spaces and fields, but sometimes they don't like the smells and inconvenience of farm machinery on the road. We want to educate people, to show them how agriculture commodities have made the county what it is. The best way to keep the open spaces and fields is to keep farming successful," said Joyce Hershey, who co-edited the cookbook.

County commissioners had approached Joyce, who had published a cookbook in 1983, with the need for a new cookbook. Betty Collins, a retired home economics teacher and gourmet cook, served as co-editor.

"We were a good mix because we are diverse," Hershey said. "I'm of Pennsylvania Dutch descent and an 'early' farm wife. Betty is of Italian descent and a gourmet cook."

Betty did not want to have just ordinary recipes in the cookbook, but Joyce knew that many residents like the old recipes. The cookbook blends preserved family recipes from the diverse ethnic groups who settled in the area and contemporary recipes that reflect the sociological climate of the county.

Recipes featured are those from outstanding cooks, fine area restaurants such as the Terrace Restaurant at Longwood Gardens', and well-known residents such as Joyce's husband — Pennsylvania State Representative Art Hershey.

Joyce said decisions were not always easy. For example, a recipe passed down through her family for pig stomach was unusual in that it called for oysters, and was served for holiday dinners. When the recipes were sent to the publishing house, editors called — askance that a recipe for pig stomach was included.

Joyce insisted that the recipe needed to be included because it was typical ethnic Pennsylvania Dutch fare.

"At least change the name," Joyce was instructed.

Joyce's mother told her that pig stomach had previously been called Dutch Goose — a name much more receptive to those unfamiliar with pig stomach.

The cookbook is suitable for a coffee table book because it includes many photographs of historical importance and interesting history.

Jane Davidson, county historical preservation officer, compiled the historic accounts including original receipts of barrels of flour deposited during the Revolutionary War and the French and Indian War. The county's Historical Society provided photographs of many of the area's former grist mills and harvesting.

About the quest to help people understand agriculture's importance, consider this excerpt from the cookbook: As you drive through Chester County in the fall and spring, those bright green fields are wheat—winter wheat. Winter wheat has been a staple of the county since its settlement. Fall is the time to sow winter wheat, which is harvested the following summer. The harvest rush is typically the week after the 4th of July, as trucks brimming with wheat line up for blocks at the mills.

"If it will cover a rabbit by Thanksgiving, you'll have a good crop," has been the saying for years among farmers in this rich land. Winter wheat is a tough crop, able to withstand prolonged spells of dry weather. It is also a good "cash" crop for Chester County farmers....

The cookbook is unusual in that it is divided into chapters highlighting each commodity in the order of its importance. For example, mushrooms are the counties largest commodity. Therefore recipes using white mushrooms appear in the first chapter, and recipes using exotic varieties appear in the second chapter.

Commodity groups helped finance the cookbook by sponsoring a chapter. In addition to mushrooms, other commodities include dairy, eggs, grains, meat, fish, poultry, vegetables, herbs, fruit, and wine.

Consumer science classes at Downingtown High School tested many of the recipes.

Perhaps the most welcomed comment by those reviewing the cookbook is one made by Joyce's husband, State Representative Art Hershey, who read the book while Joyce was away for the afternoon. When she returned home, he greeted her with these words: "I read the whole book, and I'm hungry."

Profits from the cookbook are used to fund programs sponsored by Chester County Agricultural Development Council, including scholarships to a high school senior pursuing an ag-related degree and one for a local teacher to attend the annual Ag in the Classroom workshop at Penn State. Each year an award will also be presented to a Farmer of the Year and to a public figure for distinguished service to agriculture.

Since its publication, the cookbook has been named a Mid-Atlantic regional winner in the Tabasco Company's Community Cookbook Award. The award recognized the cookbook for featuring a wonderfully diverse recipes celebrating 300 years of farming and agricultural heritage, and for its interesting narrative and selection of historical photographs.

For a copy of the "Bounty of Chester County, Heritage Edition," send a check for $26.45 plus $3 for shipping and handling payable to CCADC Cookbook/Heritage Edition. Include your name, complete address, and phone number and mail to CCADC/Heritage Cookbook, Government Services Center, Suite 270, 601 Westtown Rd., Box 2747, West Chester, PA 19382.

Here are a few recipes from the cookbook. Don't forget to check out B6 for some mushroom recipes from the cookbook.

Art Hershey's Barbecue Sauce

This barbecue sauce can be served at a pig roast or mixed with roast pork for pork barbecue sandwiches. When roasting a pig, we prepare five gallons of bread stuffing for the pig. The 200-pound pig is stuffed and put into a charcoal-fired oven for 12-14 hours.

Add the wine and reserved clam liquid. Simmer for 5 minutes. Add the clams. Cook until heated through. Do not boil or the clams will become tough. Arrange the pasta on a warm serving platter. Pour the clam sauce over the pasta. Garnish with sprigs of fresh parsley. Serve with Parmesan cheese. Yield: 6 servings.

Joyce Hershey holds a copy of the 224-page hardcover cookbook she edited to showcase the rich heritage of agriculture in Chester County. The recipes are divided into chapters featuring Chester County commodities, and includes historical photographs and narrative.

Pumpkin Rates A High Score

LEESPORT (Berks Co.) — Beta-carotene, the precursor to Vitamin A, and a substance efficiently converted by the body to Vitamin A, has been evaluated in many health studies.

Beta-carotene is important for good vision, healthy skin, a strong immune system, and bone and tooth development.

Although most dark, leafy green vegetables; red, yellow, and orange vegetables and fruits; and citrus fruits contain beta-carotene, the richest fruit-vegetable source is pumpkin.

Cook your own pumpkin or use canned solid pack pumpkin. The amount of beta-carotene in ½ cup of pumpkin far exceeds the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance (RDA) and also offers 10 percent of the RDA of potassium as well as some Vitamin C, iron, riboflavin, calcium, protein, phosphorus, and magnesium. One-half cup of freshly cooked pumpkin is only 25 calories; for solid pack pumpkin, 40 calories. Both contain very little sodium but are a source of dietary fiber. One-half cup of cooked pumpkin has 1.3 grams of fiber; solid pack pumpkin has 5 grams of fiber.

On Being a Farm Wife

(and other hazards)

Joyce Bupp

Where's the sun?

That thought passes through my head each morning in the past few weeks, as I squint through the 6 a.m. darkness on the way to the barn to help with morning chores.

Seems like just yesterday that bright sunshine washed over the eastern hill and flooded the barn with glowing light that made us wish for sunglasses at that early hour. Now the light beaming down is from long fluorescent tubes overhead, adequate, but of little ambience. Meanwhile, the sun hunkers down under the bedcovers for a few more moments each morning.

Gone, too, is the cheery, early-morning sound of the robins chirping overhead in the trees. When did they leave? Perhaps earlier than usual, since lack of moisture has rendered our soils rock-hard with dusty topping, sending the robins favorite wormy-food deep into the ground.

Annual departure of the robins is one of those occurrences we miss through the late summer time crunch of corn silage harvest and planting of fall grains and grasses. But suddenly, we notice the absence of their early-morning greeting and late-evening signoffs to each day.

Even the year-round feathered residents appear to be pretty scarce in the backyard, but only because they are all clustered together, hanging out in the patches of sunflowers we planted earlier this year. Glowing with golden-yellow flowers for a few weeks, the patches matured into scruffy stands of fading heads hanging heavy under their seed loads, surrounded by weeds thriving and healthy, despite the drought.

True wildlife corners, these small patches absolutely teem with birds feasting on the fresh black seeds. In fact, many of the drying heads bending low are already nearly devoid of their nutritious and tasty centers.

"Stop!" I want to plead to the finches and chickadees and screaming blue jays. "Save some for later."

Also hovering around the sunflower seed feeding stops is our resident, people-tolerant, meadow-raised, red-tail hawk, which apparently finds the patches to be productive hunting grounds. One afternoon last week, I spied him (her?) sweep low, right over the sunflower stand behind the yard fence, perhaps taking inventory of the wealth of sparrows stuffing themselves.

Other signs point, surely as the sun dawdles abed longer each morning, of the official arriving this coming week of the autumn equinox. Fall is my favorite season, with its cool, moonlit evenings, bright blue skies and scented with the fragrance of drying leaves gathering in corners of the yard. (Please don't burn them!) Signs of fall abound already.

Cattails hold fat, velvety-brown heads above tall stems at the edge of the widening circle of sticky mud rimming our largest pond. With only a fraction of its normal water containment left, the pond hosts only a few remaining clusters of our once thriving stand of this classic wetlands plant.

Further down in the meadow, on a steep stream bank (former stream, now dry), stalks of goldenrod, taller than my head, are turning into fluffy bunches of cheery yellow. It takes some effort to snap the strong stems into an armful-sized bouquet for the front porch, to set beside the growing pile of seasonal decorations of nature: Indian corn in reds, purples and polka-dotted ears mingling with a variety of gourds in interesting shapes and colors.

If there was any doubt about fall's proximity, it would have been erased by a small tree I spied standing, alone, in the grassy median of a stretch of interstate highway north of here, several days ago. Surrounded by concrete lanes, steel dividers, almost endless truck-heavy traffic, this small tree, solidly rooted in probably poor soil amidst a most unfriendly setting, was cheerfully turning lovely shades of red.

So we eagerly embrace the arrival of cool, crisp (hopefully wet) fall.

And offer a boot to summer's lingering flies, ticks, and mosquitoes.

Small Vegetable 'Mushrooms' In Popularity

Mushrooms are mushrooming in popularity. More and more consumers are discovering the taste, texture, and versatility that mushrooms add to many different dishes.

Baked, broiled, sauteed, stuffed, marinated, or served raw, mushrooms add mealtime accent.

Fresh mushrooms are high in potassium, low in sodium, and low in calories — an entire cup of mushrooms contain only 20 calories.

Try this assortment of recipes to taste mushrooms' appeal.

PORTABELLA MUSHROOMS, BALSAMIC VINEGAR, AND GRILLED CHICKEN PASTA

1 pound bow tie macaroni
3 to 4 large portabella mushrooms at least 4-inches in diameter with stems (approximately 2 pounds)
Olive oil
Fresh garlic cloves (approximately 3 large)
Fresh Italian Parsley
Fresh basil
Balsamic vinegar
Ground black pepper
Chicken broth (½ cup)
10 chicken breasts, boned
Fajita seasoning for chicken

Coat the chicken breasts with fajita seasoning and store for several hours or overnight in the refrigerator.

Grill the chicken breasts and slice into bite-size pieces. Set aside.

Clean the mushrooms with a brush. Chop off the bottom of the stems. Cut the mushrooms lengthwise and then chop them into bite-size pieces. Set aside.

Finely chop 3 large cloves of garlic and saute in two batches in approximately ¼ cup of olive oil. Do not brown them. Add the mushrooms and additional olive oil as needed to saute them. Sprinkle liberally with balsamic vinegar. The mushrooms should be firm to slightly limp. Set aside in a glass bowl to cool.

Boil the macaroni in a large pot for 13 minutes. Drain and rinse.

Have a large pasta bowl ready and add approximately ¼ cup of olive oil to the bottom of the bowl. Dump in the macaroni. Add the mushrooms and the sliced chicken and mix together.

Add parsley, approximately less than ¼ cup snipped. Add chopped or snipped basil, approximately three tablespoons full (do not use dry basil). Salt and pepper to taste. Mix it all together. You can add more vinegar and olive oil as needed.

Serve at room temperature.

STUFFED MUSHROOM CAPS

1 pound white mushrooms (about 2 inches across), stems removed, cleaned
1-2 cups Italian style bread crumbs
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
1 teaspoon fresh minced parsley
1 teaspoon fresh minced basil
½ cup grated Parmesan cheese

Set mushrooms in a 9x9-inch pan that has been sprayed with vegetable cooking spray. Combine remaining ingredients. This should not be a loose mixture, but should hold together. Fill each mushroom with the filling. Bake for 15-20 minutes in 375 degree oven or until filling is brown. Remove and serve.

For added flavor add:
½ cup finely chopped crabmeat

OR

Top each mushroom with a small slice of mozzarella cheese and let melt.

STUFFED PORTABELLA MUSHROOMS

4 portabella mushrooms
8 ounces cream cheese
6-8 ounces crab meat
1 cup sour cream (non-fat may be used)
½ stick butter
Stems of the mushrooms, chopped
1 pinch salt and pepper
1 tablespoon fresh basil, chopped

Mix together all ingredients and spoon mixture into mushroom caps. Bake at 375 degrees just until thoroughly hot.

Lee Laverty
Mount Joy

PORTABELLA MUSHROOMS AND ANGEL HAIR PASTA

5 tablespoons of olive oil
1 large leek or 2 bunches of scallions
4 minced garlic cloves
6 ounces portabella mushrooms, diced or sliced
1 tablespoon balsamic vinegar
10 ounces angel hair pasta

Heat the olive oil. Saute the leeks (or scallions) for about 2 minutes. Add the garlic, and saute for another 30 seconds or so. Add mushrooms, and saute until they are wilted and the liquid the mushrooms gave off has evaporated. (I don't mind the liquid, I actually think it works better with it in the end). Then add the vinegar. Stir, season with a bit of salt, and set aside.

Cook the angel hair pasta. (Allowing the veggie mixture to set while the pasta is cooking allows the flavor to enhance itself). When pasta is ready, drain, and add the veggie mixture, and viola, the best tasting pasta dish ever!

Serves: 4-5. Preparation time: 20 minutes.

CREAMED STUFFED MUSHROOMS

Stem one pound medium mushrooms. Arrange in shallow pan. Chop stems and add the following:

1 cup finely chopped pecans
3 tablespoons parsley
¼ cup butter, softened
1 clove garlic, minced
¼ teaspoon thyme
Salt and pepper

Mix well. Fill mushroom caps. When ready to serve, pour ½ cup heavy cream over all. Bake 350 degrees for 20 minutes.

Mushrooms transform even the plainest meals into gourmet fare.

Featured Recipe

If you want the best mushroom recipes, it makes sense to contact the Mushroom Capital of the United States — Chester County.

A wonderful new cookbook, "The Bounty of Chester County Heritage Edition," contains two chapters of mushroom recipes, using the familiar white button variety and the newer exotic mushrooms. See page B2 for more about this colorful hardcover cookbook.

When selecting the perfect mushroom, look for smooth, firm, closed mushrooms. Mushrooms are available in three sizes: small, medium, and large.

Small and medium mushrooms are generally used in salads and sautes.

The large mushrooms are served stuffed or broiled, or in soups and stews.

For the best flavor and vitamin content, follow these tips for mushroom care and handling:

- Do not peel mushrooms.
- Rinse mushrooms lightly because they absorb water.
- Do not overcook mushrooms. A good rule to follow is to cook mushrooms for about 10 minutes to avoid drying.
- Store mushrooms in a nonrecycled paper bag in the refrigerator. Storing in plastic accelerates deterioration.

Here is a recipe, from the Terrace Restaurant at Longwood Gardens, printed in the cookbook.

CHESTER COUNTY MUSHROOM SOUP

1 medium carrot
½ medium onion
2 ribs celery
1 tablespoon butter or vegetable oil
2 pounds button mushrooms rinsed.
8 ounces shiitake mushrooms, rinsed
8 ounces oyster mushrooms, rinsed
1 tablespoon chopped fresh tarragon
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon white pepper
6 cups chicken or vegetable stock
2 cups heavy cream
2 tablespoons melted butter or vegetable oil
2 tablespoons flour
Salt and white pepper to taste

Process carrot, onion, and celery in a food processor until minced. Saute the vegetables in 1 tablespoon butter in a heavy stockpot. Process the mushrooms in a food processor until minced. Add to the sauteed vegetables. Sprinkle with tarragon, 1 teaspoon salt, and 1 teaspoon white pepper. Cook 15 minutes. Do not burn. Add the chicken stock and cream. Bring to a boil. Mix 2 tablespoons melted butter and flour in a bowl until smooth. Add to the soup and mix well. Return to a boil. Cook until thickened, stirring constantly. Reduce the heat. Simmer 30 minutes. Season with salt and white pepper to taste. Yield 16 servings.

Deer Processing Workshop Planned

HONESDALE (Wayne Co.) — With the start of archery season right around the corner, followed by other hunting seasons, many area hunters are turning their thoughts to deer hunting. While the hunt is greatly anticipated, the care and handling of game after the hunt can be a daunting task. The first and most important steps to having good tasting venison is the proper field dressing of your deer and safe handling of the meat after harvest.

To help hunters prepare for the upcoming seasons, Penn State Cooperative Extension in Wayne County and the Pennsylvania Game Commission are sponsoring a workshop on the care and processing of deer after harvest. The workshop will be Thursday, Sept. 26 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. at the Wayne County Fairgrounds, Route 191, one mile north of Honesdale.

The workshop will feature a field dressing demonstration by Wildlife Conservation Officer with the PA Game Commission Frank Dooley. Rudy Reers, a local deer processor, will then lead a demonstration on processing a deer from field to freezer.

Dr. Bushan Jayaro, Penn State Extension veterinarian, will conclude the workshop with a discussion of diseases affecting whitetail deer, including chronic wasting disease, which is a new threat to Pennsylvania deer.

The free workshop is open to anyone with an interest in deer hunting or processing. For more information about this event, contact Dave Messersmith at the Penn State Cooperative Extension office at (570) 253-5970, ext. 239.

Ida's Notebook

by

Ida Risser

Tomorrow is the official start of fall. It has been a frustrating summer for me. I've had no garden to keep me busy as the animals ate all of it. And, my husband has not been well enough to do his regular work.

He had an operation scheduled but it was cancelled just hours before we were to leave home. Now it is rescheduled and we are hoping for some good results. Our youngest daughter, who lives in Maine, had driven here with her little boy to be a support person. It was a disappointing time.

Recently, I attended a grandson's soccer game. Probably, no one else at the game had the same thoughts as I did but it seemed like so much wasted energy. The little boys ran from one end of the large field to the other and really wore themselves out. They were dripping with perspiration. Just think how much work all of that energy could have accomplished.

When I went along to a large store devoted entirely to toys, I had an eye-opener. So many toys I've never seen in my lifetime. There were all kinds of dolls, all kinds of stuffed animals, all kinds of books, all kinds of puzzles and mechanical toys too.

I was surprised to see wooden puzzles. My children had cardboard pieces in their puzzles. But, when I was small my grandmother bought a box with three "dissected animals" for me. The horse, sheep and duck were on heavy wooden pieces and I still have them in the original box. Now eight decades later they are being produced again. I also have the handmade Peter Rabbit that a great aunt made. My sisters and I had very few toys and the ones we had were simple handmade ones but we survived.

Compost Workshop

SAYRE (Bradford Co.) — Penn State Cooperative Extension in Bradford County and the Department of Environmental Protection (DEP) will present a composting workshop on Saturday, October 26, from 9 a.m. to noon at the Patterson Building, Guthrie Square in Sayre.

The first 125 participants who pre-register and do attend the workshop will receive a free $75 Earth Machine compost bin provided by DEP.

To pre-register, call Bradford County Cooperative Extension at (570) 265-2896.

It's Not Tough To Tenderize Meats — Just Make Marinade

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Nothing ruins a dinner faster than a tough cut of meat. However, a meat scientist in Penn State's College of Agricultural Sciences says even the most unforgiving meats can be tenderized, given enough time and the right marinade.

"Giving a marinade time to work is the key," says Ed Mills, associate professor of dairy and animal science. "The ingredients that break down the connective tissue in the meat must be able to penetrate all the way through the cut. Cooks should prepare the marinade the night before, put the meat in, and let it marinate overnight in the refrigerator."

Although would-be gourmets can soak meat in anything and call it a marinade, Mills says any marinade must contain some type of acid to be an effective tenderizer. Acidic molecules in fruits, vegetables and vinegar break down and soften the connective tissue in meat over time. The alcohol in wine works in much the same way, but it is not as effective as stronger acids.

"The idea behind marinating meat is to add flavor and to tenderize," Mills says. "If you marinate a steak for 20 minutes right before you cook it, the flavor will be enhanced, but that isn't enough time to improve tenderness."

Mills recommends that every marinade include three essential elements:

- Flavor. Using seasonings and spices, cooks can give a variety of meats unique flavors.
- Acids or alcohol. Effective acids are found in tomato products, lemons, fruit juices and vinegar. Almost all marinades containing alcohol are made with wine, Mills says.
- Salt. The acid in a marinade may cause meat to lose its ability to retain water, Mills explains. Add salt improves juiciness and allows the meat to retain the marinade's flavors.

"Marinades aren't limited to less tender cuts of meat," Mills says. "All cuts of beef, pork and poultry can benefit from a marinade. It's also an easy way to add unique flavors to the dinner table."

Mills says home tenderizing products also work, although marinades can penetrate through meat more quickly. "Commercial home tenderizers usually contain papain, a derivative of the papaya," Mills explains. "Papain takes longer to penetrate into the meat because the tenderizing agent is a protein, which is much larger than the acids in fruit juices, vinegars or alcohol. Given enough time, it will penetrate and tenderize the meat but by then the surface will be soft and mushy. When using either marinades or meat tenderizers, it is helpful to use a fork to make small holes that speed up penetration.

Checkoff Helps Develop New Pork Sandwich At McDonald's

DES MOINES, Iowa — Pork producers, through their investment in the Pork Checkoff, helped develop the new "Breaded Pork Loin Sandwich" that McDonald's is offering in more than 400 locations in Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri.

"Growing demand for pork is a primary goal of all pork producers," said National Pork Board member Mark Reding, a pork producer from Howardstown, Ky. "Through new product offerings such as this sandwich in the foodservice segment, we have opportunities to build demand."

This Breaded Pork Loin Sandwich was developed for the Indiana marketplace. "The quickserve restaurants were looking for a way to use a long-time favorite sandwich," Reding said. "Pork producers are always looking for ways to get more pork on menus."

When this sandwich promotion is successful, there is the potential for the sandwich to be available in McDonald's restaurants across America. Part of the sandwich promotion is featuring the Pork. The Other White Meat logo in television advertising in Indiana, Kentucky and Missouri.

Well Preserved

Drying Fruits, Vegetables

This is the first of a three-part series on preserving foods by drying. Dried foods are tasty, nutritious, lightweight, and easy to store and use. The energy input is less than what is needed to freeze or can, and the storage space is minimal compared with that needed for canning jars and freezer containers.

Drying is one of the oldest methods of preserving foods. Throughout history, the sun, the wind, and a smoky fire were used to remove water from fruits, meats, grains, and herbs. Increasing the temperature of the food makes its moisture evaporate, and air moving over the food carries the moisture away. A balance of temperature and humidity is needed for successful drying of foods. High humidity and low temperatures can cause food to dry too slowly encouraging the growth of microorganisms.

Temperatures that are too high will cause the food to form a hard shell that traps moisture inside and cause the food to spoil.

Select a method of drying suitable for the product and where you live. While many commercially dried foods are sun dried, this method is suitable only where there is low humidity. Sun drying does not work well here in central Pennsylvania.

Room drying works well for herbs, nuts in the shell, or partially dried high-acid sweet fruits such as apple rings if there is adequate heat and air movement. Air conditioning may reduce temperatures in your home too low for drying foods.

Oven drying works well if you can set your oven to a temperature of 140 to 150 degrees F. Meats can be dried as high as 160 degrees F. Higher temperatures than this will cook the food instead of drying it. Open the oven door two to three inches to allow moisture to escape. A convection oven works well because it combines the low heat with a fan to move the air.

Commercially made and homemade food dehydrators give a better quality dried product than other methods. Microwave ovens can be used to dry small quantities of herbs.

As with other methods of preserving food, the end quality will only be as good as the food you start with. Select ripe fruit for drying. Trim away any bruised spots.

Cut foods into ⅛ to ½ inch slices. The higher the water content, the larger you should make the slice. Small slices of high-moisture foods, such as watermelon, would disappear when all the moisture has evaporated. Peel fruits and vegetables that would normally be peeled. Although apples and pears sometimes have the skin left on, the skin tends to toughen as it dries.

Apples, pears, peaches, and apricots are better when pretreated. Pretreatment reduces oxidation making the product more appetizing, giving a better color, reducing vitamin loss, and lengthening shelf life. Place cut fruits in a solution of ascorbic acid or in fruit juices containing ascorbic acid such as orange, lemon, lime or pineapple juice. Soak five minutes before placing on trays to dry. Do not keep cut fruit in a holding solution for more than one hour. Other methods of pretreating include syrup blanching, sulfating, and blanching.

Syrup blanching involves simmering the prepared fruit for 10 minutes in a sugar syrup (1 cup sugar, 1 cup white corn syrup, and 2 cups water) and then letting it stand in the hot syrup 30 to 45 minutes before draining, rinsing, and placing on drying trays. Syrup blanched fruit is sweeter but also sticker than fruit treated by other methods. Soaking fruits in a solution of one tablespoon sodium bisulfite in one gallon water for five to 10 minutes also slows oxidation. Sulfating isn't recommended for use by individuals on restricted sodium diets or who have asthmatic or respiratory conditions.

Some fruits such as blueberries and cranberries need to be dipped into boiling water to check (crack) the skins. Be careful not to let the fruit in the boiling water too long or the fruit will turn to mush.

Blanching is recommended for asparagus, green beans, broccoli, cauliflower, corn, eggplant, potatoes, and peas to slow the enzymatic reactions which will continue during drying and storage. Blanching also softens the cell structure, allowing moisture to escape and allows the vegetable to rehydrate faster.

Blanched vegetables should be drained and placed on the dryer trays. The heat from the blanching will give them a head start in the drying process. Onions, garlic, peppers, and herbs do not need blanching.

Some foods dry much better than others. According to Leanna DeLong, author of How to Dry Foods, fruits that dry well are apples, apricots, cherries, citrus peel, coconuts, dates, figs, grapes, nectarines, peaches, pears, pineapples, and prune plums. Some fruits not recommended for drying include avocados, berries with seeds such as raspberries, citrus fruits, crab apples, olives, pomegranates, and quince.

Chili peppers were the only vegetable to receive an excellent rating for drying. Carrots, corn, garlic, horseradish, onions, parsley, parsnips, peas, green beans, and potatoes received a good rating. Some vegetables including brussels sprouts, lettuce, radishes, and winter squash are not recommended for drying. Next week we will look at storing and using dried foods. The third week we will look at how to make fruit leathers and jerky.

Milk Buds To Perform At West Lampeter Fair

LAMPETER (Lancaster Co.) — West Lampeter Community Fair is planning to do some "hitching up" during its annual three-day run, scheduled Sept. 25, 26 and 27 at the Lampeter Community Grounds.

The "hitching" that fair planners have on the docket of this year's events is not some sort of collective wedding ceremony but special appearances of the "Milk Buds."

A family of ponies, the Milk Buds features an eight-pony hitch which has appeared at fairs and exhibitions across the country, promoting milk and family values. Accompanying the ponies is the Schottler family, Somerset, Wis., who not only travel with the pony hitch, but often add music during their performances along the way.

The Schottler family are dairy farmers from the northwestern part of Wisconsin and have found this promotional effort to be a popular one with fairgoers.

"We want to promote what we think is the best beverage. We want to sell milk," says John Schottler of the Milk Buds appearances. "We can exhibit or perform just about anywhere."

Making Your Money Count

Has that money you got for your birthday or earned doing chores outgrown your piggy bank? Maybe it's time to think about opening your own bank account.

To save money safely, open a savings account at a local bank or savings and loan. The bank keeps your money and gives you an account number and book, called a passbook, to keep track of what you have saved. You can add money, or deposit it, any time the bank is open.

When you decide to deposit money, take the money to the bank with your passbook and give it to a bank teller who stands behind a long desk. Once your money is added, your passbook will show the total, or balance, of your account.

In addition to the money you have put in your account, the bank will give you some money, too. This money is called interest, and the bank gives it to you as payment for using your money while it is there.

If you decide to use some of the money, you may withdraw it. However, you cannot take out more money than you have put in your account.

Poisonous Frogs

They may only be ¼ to 2 inches long, but poison dart frogs produce one of the most harmful animal poisons known to man.

These frogs are brightly colored, which is a warning to other animals to stay away. There are black and green, black and yellow, green banded, blue and strawberry poison dart frogs. But the most toxic, or harmful, are the bright yellow frogs. Found in Colombia, South America, these frogs can hurt—and even kill—humans if their poison gets into a person's cut or mouth, or soaks through his/her skin.

Living in tropical rain forests, poison dart frogs eat ants, termites and tiny beetles. They use their sticky tongues to capture their food.

The frogs get their name because South American native tribe members use them to make their hunting darts poisonous. Actually, only three species of the frogs have poison that's bad enough to make these darts. But in those species, one frog can produce enough to make 50 darts poisonous. The natives hunt with those darts because the poison is strong enough to kill small animals, like monkeys and birds.

Five-Acre Corn Contest Offers A 'Harvest' Of Information

MICHELLE KUNJAPPU

SCHAEFFERSTOWN (Lebanon Co.) — Entering and winning the Pennsylvania Five Acre Corn Club Contest may not necessarily be about winning.

For corn grower Steve Wenger, his goal and emphasis centers on the information he can glean from the results.

"I don't enter the contest to win," he said. "I enter the contest because I can look for strengths or know what I need to improve."

Steve took home a second place in the shelled grain non-irrigated tilled class in the 1998-2000 three-year average award division with a yield of 220.8 bushels per acre and a plant population of 37,636 using NK N82J6.

Additionally during a recent meeting members of the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association voted

President's Message

Guy Wagner
President, PCGA

Hello, my name is Guy Wagner. I'm the president of the PCGA. I'm proud and honored to be PCGA president.

It's been an exciting year for PCGA. We conducted our conference Feb. 5 in Grantville and we had a good turn out and an excellent program. Ed Winkle's program has generated a lot of interest in the Nu-Till system. I have been using it for the past two years, resulting in excellent stands and my best yields ever.

I'd like to suggest that everyone look at Ed's 14 step handout from his presentation. It has worked very well for me.

I would like to personally thank all of our speakers. I think they all did a fantastic job.

PCGA made some big changes in 2001. The first was our name change from the Pennsylvania Master Corn Growers Association to the Pennsylvania Corn Growers Association. This has brought us more in line with the other state organiza-

Northampton County 4-H At Camp Shehaqua

One of the sizzling events for 4-H'ers this summer was 4-H camp at Camp Shehaqua in the Poconos. Each year, Northampton County 4-H members may choose to spend a week at Hickory Run State Park in the Poconos. The 4-H camp is used by 30 county 4-H programs.

This year, Northampton County had 25 campers and four counselors at Camp Shehaqua. They experienced nature first hand by seeing bears, turkeys, a fox, and thunderstorms, to name a few.

Camping with Northampton County also are Lehigh, Schuylkill, and Carbon counties.

4-H campers select a morning workshop during which they complete a 4-H project. The morning workshops that campers could choose from include World Traveler, Paul Bunyon's Forestry, Feathered Friends, and Sciencing with Snails.

During the afternoons, they could hike to the lake, try the low-ropes course, swim in the pool, or explore nature through art.

AgrAbility Project Endorses National Farm Safety, Health Week

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Agriculture is one of the most hazardous occupations in the United States. The National Safety Council reports that in 2001, 700 people working in agriculture died and 130,000 more sustained disabling injuries. Many of these deaths and injuries resulted from incidents involving farm machinery that was being operated on public roadways.

National Farm Safety and Health Week (NFSH) is Sept. 15-21. The theme and accompanying materials, "National Farm Safety and Health Week...Not Just for Farmers Anymore," are designed to heighten awareness among both the agricultural community and the general public of the dangers posed by operating farm machinery on public roadways.

Everyday, AgrAbility Project staff across the country provides assistance to farmers, ranchers, and farmworkers who have sustained health challenges that are the result of incidents involving farm machinery. Endorsing and disseminating this year's NFSH message is one way Project staff is working to achieve a major Project goal — helping those who have one disability avoid sustaining another.

AgrAbility Project staff provides a range of no-cost assistance to farmers, ranchers, and farmworkers who have disabilities. This assistance includes information on how to accommodate their disabilities and maintain their rural life-style by modifying their equipment, structures, and operations. Farmers, ranchers, and farmworkers with any type of physical, cognitive, or sensory condition, (amputation, traumatic brain injury, or hearing impairment) that limits their ability to do their agricultural work or activities of daily living are eligible for AgrAbility services. To date, hundreds of people have received assistance from the AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians Project.

To find out more about what AgrAbility for Pennsylvanians Project can do for you, call Linda Fetzer at (814) 863-7490, Dr. Connie D. Baggett at (814) 863-7415 or visit the Project's Website at http://AgExtEd.cas.psu.edu/agrab/.

USDA Cooperative State Research, Education, and Extension Service funds a National AgrAbility Project and 21 state projects. In addition to on-site technical assistance, staff offers information and referral, training for rural professionals, education on preventing additional injuries, and peer support groups. Since 1991, AgrAbility Projects have provided assistance and accessibility solutions to over 11,000 farmers, ranchers, farmworkers, and their families.

For additional information about National Farm Safety and Health Week visit www.nsc.org/farmsafe.htm.

Four Simple Steps To Food Safety

This year's National Food Safety theme is Four Simple Steps to Food Safety. It celebrates the message of Fight BAC to keep food safe from harmful bacteria:

- Wash hands and surfaces often
- Avoid cross contamination
- Cook to proper temperatures
- Refrigerate promptly

Make the meals and snacks from your kitchen as safe as possible. Bacteria (BAC) on surfaces or on food that could cause foodborne illness.

Even though you can't see, smell or taste BAC, bacteria may contaminate wholesome food. At risk are young children whose immune system has not fully developed, frail elderly with deteriorated immune systems, pregnant mothers, or person with other illnesses that weaken their immunity. You can fight BAC with four simple steps.

Clean: Wash hands and surfaces often. Practice washing your hands thoroughly. Start with warm water, as hot as is comfortable. Apply the soap and scrub your hands together to make bubbles and loosen the dirt. Pay attention to the cuticles around the nail, creases and calluses. Work the lather on your hands for at least 20 seconds before rinsing hands thoroughly under running water. Dry hands with a single use paper towel or hot air dryer.

Bacteria gets on cutting boards, utensils, sponges and counter tops in the kitchen. Always wash surfaces with hot soapy water after preparing each food item and before you move on to the next food. Place plastic or non-porous cutting boards through the dishwasher. Kitchen surfaces are best cleaned with a paper towel or cloth towels that are washed in the hot cycle of your washing machine.

Separate: Don't cross contaminate. Bacteria can spread from one food to another when handling raw meat, poultry and seafood. It's important to keep these foods and their juices separate and away from ready-to-eat foods. Consider separating raw meat, poultry and seafood from other groceries in your shopping cart and in your refrigerator. Use a separate cutting board for raw meat products and thoroughly wash everything in contact with raw meat. Never place cooked meat on a plate that has held raw meat, poultry or seafood.

Cook to proper temperatures. Cook foods long enough to reach an internal temperature to kill harmful bacteria in meat, poultry, casseroles and other foods. Roasts and steaks should reach 145F and poultry should be cooked to 180F. Ground beef may harbor bacteria from processing so it must reach 160F; color is not a safe indicator.

Eggs should be cooked until the yoke and whites are firm. Do not use recipes that leave eggs raw or only partially cooked. Fish is safe to eat when it is cooked to be opaque and flakes easily with a fork.

Microwave cooking may leave cold spots in the food where bacteria could survive. For best results always: cover the food; stir or rotate it in the oven for even distribution of cooking rays and allow the food to rest 2 minutes to complete the cooking cycle. Bring sauces, soups and gravy to a boil when reheating. Heat leftovers thoroughly to at least 165F.

Chill: Refrigerate promptly. Cool foods quickly to keep bacteria from growing and multiplying.

Refrigerator temperature should be at 40F and the freezer at 0F. Check these temperatures occasionally with an appliance thermometer.

Follow these steps to Fight BAC:

- Refrigerate or freeze foods within two hours.
- Thaw foods in the refrigerator, under cool running water or in the microwave oven only if you will complete the cooking cycle immediately. Marinade foods in the refrigerator.
- Divide large amounts of hot food into shallow containers for quick cooling in the refrigerator.
- Cool air must circulate around the food to keep food safe, don't pack the refrigerator.

For more information about safe food handling and preparation contact your local cooperative extension office. Volunteer groups are encouraged to schedule a comprehensive training using Penn State's new curriculum, Cooking for Crowds.

Visit Village 'Preserved In Time' To Track Railroads' Role In American Heritage

LOU ANN GOOD
Food And Family Features Editor

MUDDY CREEK FORKS (York Co.) — "I want to preserve a part of our past that few people see. I feel it is important for our generation to preserve history for children," said Dolores Krick, president of Ma and Pa Railroad Preservation Society.

Ma and Pa is the abbreviation for the Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad that ran from York to Baltimore and stopped in Muddy Creek Forks as often as eight times a day. The railroad brought goods and supplies to the communities through which it passed and took milk and produce to the larger cities.

In Muddy Creek Forks, farmers bought wheat to the Roller Mill to be ground into flour or to the grain elevator to be stored or loaded on railroad cars. Some produce was processed in the local cannery and shipped out by rail.

Railroads changed the landscape of America. Almost overnight, villages sprang up at stations stops that became the hub of activity for surrounding communities. The railroads provided transportation for people, freight, and mail. Railroads provided employment and a brighter future for many financially struggling families.

In the days before WalMart and other superstores, residents in the rural villages could receive store items from York or Baltimore within a day by rail, according to Krick.

But the popularity of rail transportation dwindled when cars, trucks, and later air travel offered more convenience and faster travel. Many railroad towns became ghost towns almost overnight during the transition to air travel.

Muddy Creek Forks offers a window of life as it was during the railroads' heyday.

"The preservation and renovation of the buildings and the improvement of the tracks have made it possible for people to learn about rural York County in 1915," Krick said of the historical efforts that she and others who recognize the historical significance railroads play in America's heritage.

On Saturday Sept. 28, Muddy Creek Forks Village celebrates Railroad Heritage Day from 10 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Tours of the 1894 wooden passenger car and caboose 2007 will be offered. Motorcar rides will depart from the station platform every 40 minutes.

Visitors can tour the town, which was once a bustling community with a general store, railroad station, post office, roller mill and grain elevator.

The original 1900's post office housed inside the general store is still intact. Even the unclaimed mail remains in the postal boxes.

Volunteers dressed in period costumes will provide a glimpse into life as it was in 1900 — even the sending telegraph messages.

Slide shows, "A Journey in Time," and "The Ma & Pa — Debunking the Myths," will be narrated on the hour in the store.

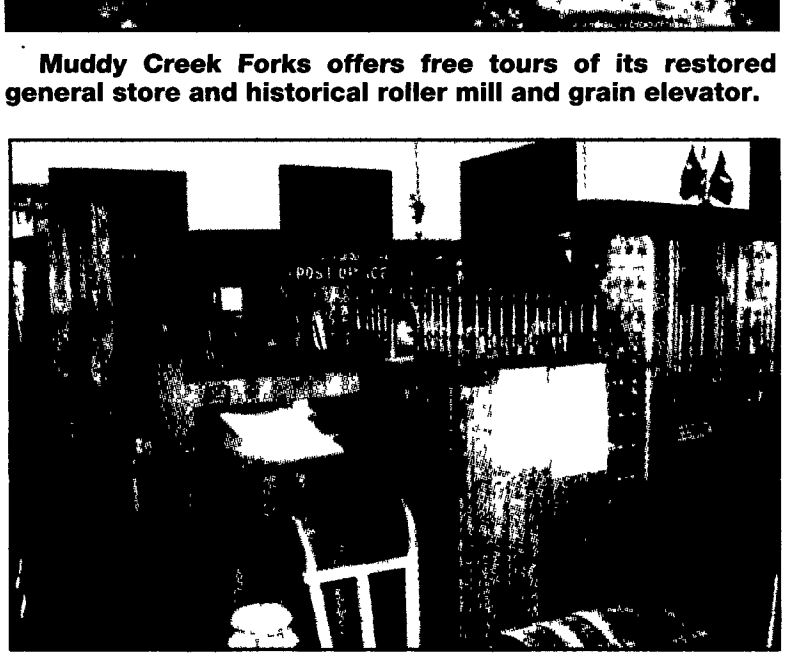
Unique artifacts from the railroad station and from locomotives and historical photos will be on display. Some artifacts and photographs will be available for bid at the silent auction to be conducted on the second floor of the store.

The event promises fun for the whole family. In addition to the many historical-related activities, also available are special children's activities with T.J. the clown, and food available for purchase.

Directions to Muddy Creek Forks from Interstate 83: Take exit to State Route 851 at Shrewsbury. Follow Rt. 851 east through Stewartstown to New Park. Watch signs carefully. In New Park when Rt. 851 bears right toward Delta, take the left fork to New Park Road and follow about six miles through Gatchellville to Muddy Creek Forks. (Driving time from I83 is about 30 minutes).

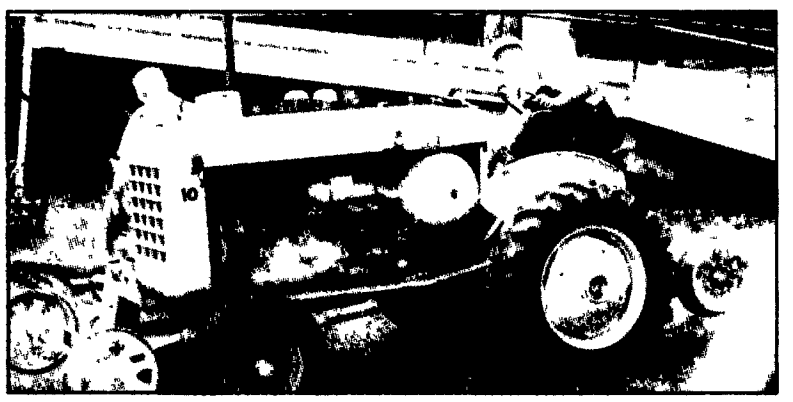
For more information, check out the Website www.mapaps.org for a virtual tour of the railroad town or call (717) 927-6023.

On Sept. 28 and again on Oct. 13 and Oct. 20, admission is free to all exhibits. Train rides are $4 for adults, $2 for children.



Muddy Creek Forks offers free tours of its restored general store and historical roller mill and grain elevator.

The original post office inside the general store is still intact. Unclaimed mail from when the post office last operated is still in the boxes.



This isn't a field tractor but a shramm used to replace railroad ties.

Volunteers dress in period costumes during the annual Railroad Heritage Day.

Do You Need A Translator At Antique Shows?

If you ever feel you're in a foreign country when you attend some of the pricier antique shows you aren't alone.

Many dealers seem to have a new language to describe just about everything. When you for instance inquire about what appears to be a French writing desk with gilt metal trim, his reply could be, "Isn't it a wonderful bureau plat with that ormolu trim?"

Moving on, you ask a silver dealer if he has any unusual small pieces. "Would you like a caddy spoon?" he asked.

You thought he was joking and probably answered, "I don't golf."

It isn't only beginning collectors who are often intimidated when they come face to face with the language of antiques. The terms are of course correct for the items, but unless you know the language of antiquese they can be confusing.

CLUES: What's so important about knowing antiques and collectibles terms anyway? For one thing it separates the beginner from the knowledgeable collector. When you break down the language barrier, the dealer knows you must have an idea about the quality and authenticity of the item. He is less likely to try and palm off a married piece (the addition of parts that weren't original to the piece).

Then there's the snobbish point of view. When those fancy names are dropped at a social event, you wouldn't want everybody to know you didn't know what a "voyeuse" is. Imagine your embarrassment if you thought it was the plural of voyeur. Actually, it is a chair with a padded top rail to the back, for an observer to lean on, while the chairs' occupant played cards.

Of course, some objects are known by several names...all of which you should know.

One example is the massive cupboard, popular from the 17th to the early 19th century in the Hudson River and Delaware valleys. It is known as a Kas, a Schrank, a cupboard or a wardrobe.

One of my favorite terms is "squab". This doesn't refer to a game bird, but removable stuffed cushions; originally used on 17th and 18th century French chairs. So, when someone tells you about the striped squab on his Bergere, clever you will know he is talking about a French, upholstered, easy chair with a striped cushion.

What about a wall pocket? This is the term for a ceramic flower-vase made to be attached to a wall. They are also known as cornucopia because of their shape.

Another strange ceramic name is a pap-boat. Actually a small, boat-shaped bowl for feeding "pap"(cereal or gruel) to infants and invalids.

There are some surprises when you actually breakdown a term. For instance, the elegant Cheval glass (a full length mirror), translates into "horse mirror"...a mirror large enough to reflect a horse.

The ceramic world is full of fancy name descriptions...many in French. A good example would be a pate-sur-pate porcelain vase. This painting technique was used in the late 19th century by Sevres, Minton, Meissen and others. The effect is of a cameo, in slight relief the result of successive layering of semi-fluid white slip.The backgrounds are tinted.

Help can be found in auction catalogs, especially those with European items. Their descriptions are an education in themselves. A secretaire-a-abbatant" for instance is a cabinet-shaped piece of furniture, with an upright panel that falls to give a writing surface.

When various pieces of chinese ceramics are illustrated in color, with descriptions you learn that sometimes French descriptive names are used. "Famille noire" refers to porcelain with a black background. "Famille rose" consists of pink, red and rose colors on the porcelain. "Famille verte" is green. "Famille" is family.

You can get more help from the various dictionaries listing everything from furniture to glass, silver and ceramics. You too can speak antiquease.

Great Lakes Dairy Sheep Symposium To Be Conducted On Cornell Campus, Nov. 7-9

ITHACA, N.Y. — The eighth Great Lakes Dairy Sheep Symposium will be conducted on the Cornell University campus, Nov. 7-9. The charter meeting of the Dairy Sheep Association of North (DSANA) is planned concurrently.

As demand for sheep milk and cheeses increases, dairy sheep breeds are becoming better established in North America and are improving rural economies. "The Great Lakes Dairy Sheep Symposium is the unique annual event for transmitting information among dairy-sheep farmers and sheep-cheese makers," says Michael Thonney, Cornell professor of animal science. "Because there are many other avenues to learn about general sheep management, we're keeping the focus on information about sheep dairying."

New York state is home to Old Chatham Sheepherding, the largest sheep dairy in the United States. Several smaller sheep dairies are located in the state, and two of these will be featured on the symposium tour Saturday, Nov. 9.

The registration fee for the three-day symposium is $100, with a reduction to $75 for those joining DSANA ($50 annual dues for charter membership). Additional family or farm members will pay a reduced registration fee of $60. Registration includes lunches on Thursday and Saturday, a lamb barbecue on Thursday evening, the cost of transportation for the Saturday tour and refreshments during the breaks. The Friday banquet is $25 per person.

Complete information about the symposium, including a brochure and registration form, is available at the Cornell Dairy Sheep Website at http://www.sheep.cornell.edu/sheep/dairysheep/ or by contacting Mike Thonney, 114 Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853-4801. For more information call (607) 255-2851 or e-mail mlt2@cornell.edu. Or contact Michelle Cole, 130 Morrison Hall, Cornell University, Ithaca, NY 14853-4801, (607) 255-7712, mlc44@cornell.edu.

❖ BUSINESS NEWS ❖

Andy Terrell Joins MidAtlantic Farm Credit

LANCASTER (Lancaster Co.) — Jeff Tyson, regional vice president, has announced the hiring of Andrew "Andy" Terrell as an agribusiness account executive for MidAtlantic Farm Credit's Penn Region.

The Penn Region consists of 15 counties in southeastern Pennsylvania. Terrell will work from MidAtlantic's Lancaster office and work with agribusiness customers throughout the region.

Terrell has held various positions with financial organizations. He previously worked for Farm Credit for five years, and brings that background to his current position. "Andy has years of experience in our industry and with his Farm Credit knowledge we feel he'll be an asset to the customers and our existing loan staff," said Tyson.

Terrell grew up on a dairy farm in Berks County. Later he resided in Chester County where he worked on a relative's farm and an Agway dealership during the summer. He attended Henderson High School, West Chester, and graduated from Penn State University with a degree in ag business management. Currently he resides in Neffsville with his wife and three daughters.

Hoober Offers Yield Monitor Expertise

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Forty owners of Ag Leader monitoring systems attended special seminars conducted at Hoober Incorporated's Intercourse and McAlisterville locations.

The seminars were led by Ken Diller, salesman and Calvin Eby, assistant service manager of combines and equipment, who have been working with yield monitors for more than eight years. The seminar focused on the importance of proper operation and calibration of Ag Leader yield monitor equipment.

"I can't stress how vital it is to take the time to calibrate your yield monitor correctly to get the most out of the product," said Diller. Yield monitors display yield, moisture, area, weight, bushels per hour, etc. on the go in the combine. The seminars covered monitor setup, operation, calibration, yield data management, and combine adjustments.

These helpful seminars are a part of Hoober's ongoing commitment to service. "It's nice to be able to share this information and technology with our customers and help them get the most from their investment," said Eby. Ag Leader and Hoober have been partners in precision farming for the past eight years.

New Wood Hog Feature Increases Ease Of Maintenance And Safety

CINCINNATI, Ohio — The FECON BA Wood Hog raises horizontal grinding to unmatched levels of convenience, ease of maintenance and safety with an all-new, unique tilting hammermill feature for servicing the hammermill area.

The hammermill hood is elevated by first raising the feed roller and pinning it into a locked position vertically against the engine compartment. Using the same cylinder function, the 62-inch hammermill is then tilted vertically to 90°.

The tilt feature heightens safety levels because the operator no longer must stand beneath the feed roller to service the mill. In addition, screen changes are simplified since screens can be removed and replaced through the top of the Wood Hog, instead of through the sides or back, which is common on other horizontal grinders.

The new tilting hammermill feature is available on both the BA 6000 and BA 8000 models of the Wood Hog.

One of the most powerful horizontal grinders in the industry, the BA Wood Hog efficiently reduces wood waste, stumps, C&D material, yard waste and other organics. With an enormous 40-inch x 62-inch feed opening, the BA Wood Hog can process hefty material, such as stumps, or large volumes of brush, leaves and grass and reduce it to a controlled size through a wide range of particle sizing screens.

A cost-effective, high production machine, the 73,000-pound BA Wood Hog was designed and built with operators, maintenance personnel and management in mind. The horizontal grinding technology pioneered by FECON reduces fuel consumption, labor and service/maintenance costs, which were significant disadvantages in prior grinding technologies.

A 600 Hp or 800 Hp Caterpillar engine powers the hammermill: power is transferred from the engine to the hammermill through a hydraulically engaged tensioner, fluid clutch and Kevlar reinforced powerband V-belts, eliminating a friction clutch.

A single button on the control panel or the wireless remote control engages the hammermill, so operators need not operate a manual clutch and cannot wear out costly clutch components. The system also provides excellent protection from foreign debris.

The aggressive confirmation of the hammermill makes it effective on a wide range of tough materials. Each of the 24 fixed-position hammer assemblies or optional 48 swing hammers incorporate an easily changed, reversible cutting tool. One person can change a complete set of cutting tools in only 45 minutes.

Case IH Utility Tractors Deliver Big Tractor Productivity

RACINE, Wis. — Good things are coming in smaller packages from Case IH. Many key features found on Case IH row-crop tractors are now available on the new 66 to 82 PTO horsepower (hp) Case IH JXU Series Maxxima utility tractors.

"Just like its big brothers — Magnum™ and Maxxum® — the JXU Series Maxxima line offers a 24x24 powershuttle transmission, electro-hydraulic left-hand shuttle, electronic draft control, turbocharged engines and leading three-point hitch lift capacity," says Joe Weicksel, marketing manager for Case IH JXU Series utility tractors. "Put all those features together in a versatile and maneuverable utility tractor, and you get a tool that will get more work done faster with less effort every day."

The JXU line is the premium offering in the Case IH Maxxima utility tractor family. Available in either two-wheel drive or mechanical front-wheel drive (MFD) configurations, with a cab or flat deck and rollover protection system (ROPS), the JXU is specially designed for material handling functions and is well suited to haying and light field work.

Case IH 3.9-liter engines on the JX80U, JX90U and JX100U deliver 66, 76 and 82 PTO hp, respectively. All JXU Series tractor engines also feature dynamic balancers to reduce the engine's natural vibration and produce quieter operation.

Three transmission choices allow producers to customize a machine to match their needs. The standard 24 forward, 12 reverse, two-speed powershift offers a fully synchronized mechanical left-hand shuttle control. The 24x24, two-speed powershift uses an electro-hydraulic powershuttle for fingertip control, allowing the operator to change direction without clutching. And the 20x12 creeper with fully synchronized mechanical shuttle allows for on-the-go shifting and quick shuttling between forward and reverse.

"The JXU transmissions are designed with operator productivity in mind," says Weicksel. "Our ergonomic controls and the large number of working and transport speeds are unmatched in the class."

JXU Series Maxxima tractors can be further customized with a variety of tire options for differing farm and field conditions, as well as a range of loaders and attachments.

Case JX100U: A synchronized mechanical shuttle transmission with two-speed powershift, standard on the Case IH JXU Series Maxxima tractors, provides 24 forward and 12 reverse speeds.

Knight Introduces Smaller Vertical Mixer Model

BRODHEAD, Wis. — Knight introduces a new vertical mixer model to its Verti-Maxx Mixer line.

The new model has 320 cubic foot capacity. The Verti-Maxx features a patented bull gear drive that takes the dependability and simplicity of vertical mixers to the next level.

The twin-auger design provides faster mixing, more efficient bale processing, and lower loading heights compared to competitive single-auger verticals.

Six Verti-Maxx models are available from 320 to 1,125 cubic foot sizes in addition to their proven line of reel and four-auger mixers.

Rutter Cow Named York Fair Champion

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

YORK (York Co.) — "Rutter Bros. Fayettes Lizzy," a 4-year-old exhibited by 4-H'er Terri Johnson, York, took supreme champion honors at the York Fair. In addition to her supreme and open class wins, Lizzy was selected top over the junior division Guernsey breed competition.

Supreme judging capped the annual York Fair's dairy show competition, with more than 160 head entered, and five breed champions competing for the coveted best-overall title. Others in the supreme runoff lineup were: Ayrshire junior and open division champion, "Farm Valley Soldier Harmony," 4-year-old bred and exhibited by Susan Richardson, Fawn Grove; Brown Swiss, "Foust Hill Farm Lollipop," senior three bred and exhibited by David Krone, Foust Hill Farm, Glen Rock; Holstein, "Sunnybend Jump for Joy," bred and exhibited by Tom Boyer family, Sunnybend Farm, York; Jersey junior and open, "Jules Tidbit," exhibited by Amanda Thompson, Wellsville; and Milking Shorthorn, "Joy-El Resolve Pickle," bred and exhibited by Heather Crowl, Airville.

Open and junior class Guernsey breed champion honors went to Terri Johnson with her "Lizzy" cow, later selected the show's supreme dairy entry. At the halter for Terri is her sister, Kelly Johnson, with the banner held by Pennsylvania Fair Queen Jacqueline Pratt.

Champion Jersey in York Fair's open and junior shows was Amanda Thompson's senior 3-year-old. Jacqueline Pratt, Pennsylvania fair queen, displays the banner award.

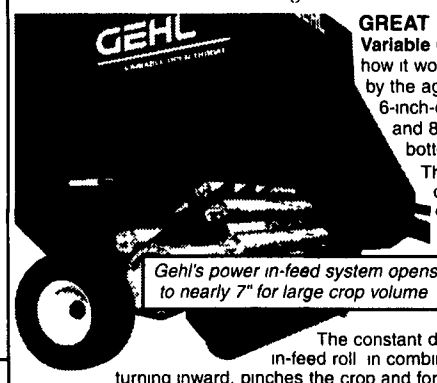
GEHL. MODEL RB 2580 ROUND BALERS
Featuring the ALL-NEW Variable Open-Throat Power In Feed System



Gehl's power in-feed system opens to nearly 7" for large crop volume

GREAT BALING STARTS HERE
Variable Open-Throat Power In-Feed System Here's how it works The incoming crop is pulled off the pickup by the aggressive action of two power in-feed rolls – a 6-inch-diameter pivoting power in-feed roll on top and and 8-inch diameter fixed power in-feed roll on the bottom

The top pivoting power in-feed roll rides over the crop as it is pulled into the bale chamber An extension spring keeps the toproll under constant downward force

The spring tension increases as the variable throat opens from a minimum of 3/4 of an inch up to a maximum opening of nearly 7 inches

The constant downward force of the pivoting upper powered in-feed roll in combination with the fixed lower in-feed roll, both turning inward, pinches the crop and forces it into the bale chamber The stripping roll strips crop off the belt and forces it down to the incoming crop Adjustable scrapers on the stripping roll and pivoting roll eliminate buildup

THREE-BALL TWINE BOX.
Gehl balers are designed to keep you going all day long with six-ball twine storage. They're located in full-size doors that open to provide easy access to baler components like an optional chain oiler system or the Total Density Control adjustments

GAUGE WHEELS. Allow the pickup to follow field contours while keeping tines out of the dirt. That saves wear and tear on the pickup and means less dirt in your bale. Gauge wheels are standard equipment with the wide pickup and an option with some others.

BELTS. Deluxe balers feature chevron belts (pictured above) with heavy duty, plate-type belt lacing. The belts ar e 6-1/2 inches wide for closer spacing between belts and less space between the belts and side sheets. Betls are configured in a staggered pattern to minimize trash build-up.

Voices From the Field
Case-IH Axial-Flow Combines

"We had a John Deere combine before and we upgraded to International because of the performance and the rotor. We have a Case IH 2388 now and we like how aggressive it is – you can really harvest faster. Hoober service has been excellent on the combine, they are friendly and good guys to work with. They will work on weekends if possible to help us out where other companies may not."

BETTER BEATS BIGGER.

How do you shatter the world plowing record set by a 425 hp track tractor? You don't have to get bigger. You don't have to get tracks. You just have to get better. That's what happened when the Massey Ferguson 8280 fixed frame wheeled tractor set a new world record. The MF 8280 fine tuned to deliver 387 hp, outdid the predecessor by nearly 100 acres, plowing 621 acres in 24 hours.

What makes the MF 8280 better? Take a world class engine, a transmission that won't quit and add a powerful hydraulic system Throw in a high tech control system that automatically monitors and adjusts the flow of power to the wheels for less slip and you've got better...more than 24 acres an hour better.

So don't just get a bigger tractor next time you have a big job to do Get a better tractor. Get a Massey Ferguson 8280 and shatter some records yourself.

Suzuki quadrunner 4 7 cc s may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all 2 1 r riders take a training course We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1-800-852-5344. ATV's can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs do not mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

Suzuki QuadRunner ATVs may be used by those aged 16 and older. Suzuki highly recommends that all ATV riders take a training course. We'll even pay for it. For safety and training course information, see your dealer or call the SVIA at 1 800 852 5344. ATVs can be hazardous to operate. For your safety, always wear a helmet, eye protection and protective clothing. Always avoid paved surfaces. Never ride on public roads. Never carry passengers or engage in stunt riding. Riding and alcohol or other drugs don't mix. Avoid excessive speeds. Be extra careful on difficult terrain. Along with concerned conservationists everywhere, Suzuki urges you to "TREAD LIGHTLY" on public and private land. Preserve your future riding opportunities by showing respect for the environment, local laws and the rights of others when you ride.

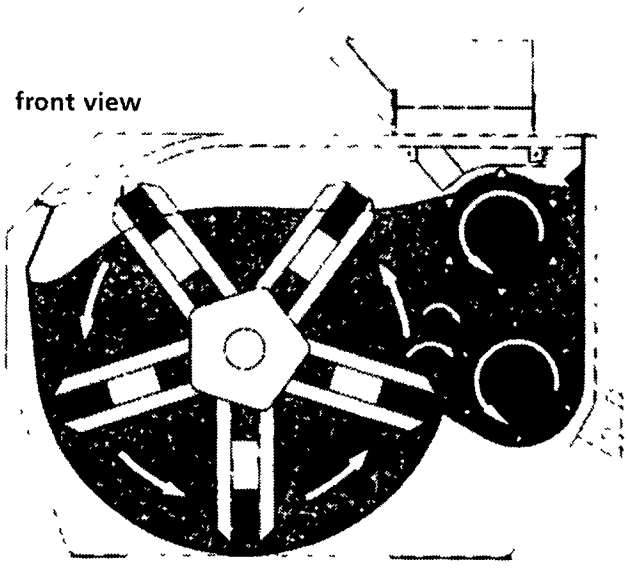
KNIGHT . . . the REEL Advantage

A Faster, More Thorough Mix

front view



The large-diameter reel provides a gentle tumbling action and the two side augers produce an end-to-end blending action. This unique combination ensures faster mixing and unloading times, and a very thorough mix, even when mixing small batches.

Positive Results For Active Ingredients In Products

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Pilot Therapeutics Holdings, Inc. (OTC Bulletin Board: PLTT.OB), a specialty pharmaceutical company developing and commercializing a portfolio of pharmaceutical and clinically validated over-the-counter products, announced that early results from North Carolina test plots of specialty plants that supply the active ingredients for the company's medical food and botanical prescription products were extremely positive. Both borage and echium grew well in three test plots planted throughout North Carolina.

Borage is a plant that supplies gammalinolenic acid (GLA) for Pilot's lead over-the-counter medical food product for the dietary management of asthma, Airozin (TM), which the company plans to launch later this year. Echium is a plant that supplies a rare fatty acid for Pilot's lead botanical prescription drug candidate for elevated triglycerides associated with heart disease, stroke, and diabetes.

The test plots were planted in the western, Piedmont, and eastern regions of North Carolina, and provide evidence that the specialty crops Pilot requires for its products can be grown throughout all regions of the Southeast.

"The positive results from the North Carolina test plots of borage and echium are positive indications that Pilot should be able to increase efficiencies in its supply chain and reduce costs, which are critical factors to better position the company and its products for sustained growth and profitability," said Floyd "Ski" Chilton, Ph.D., Pilot's president and chief executive officer. "We are especially gratified that the ability to grow these specialty crops in the Southeast gives Pilot the potential to positively and dramatically impact agriculture in this region. Since our inception, it has been a primary objective of Pilot to combine biotechnology and agriculture to develop products that fundamentally improve human health and disease."

Pilot's chairman, Glenn Kline, who also serves as managing partner of The Academy Funds, Pilot's founding institutional investor, also expressed enthusiasm. "The positive results from the test plots are another accomplishment in a long list of milestones achieved by Pilot. The evidence of these achievements is Pilot's ability to raise more than $10 million in equity financing in an incredibly challenging private equity environment. With the added support of Pilot's important strategic partners, including Kings, Inc., Quintiles Transnational Corp., John Hopkins and Wake Forest University Schools of Medicine, the company is now positioned to raise the funds to launch what we believe to be a revolutionary, over-the-counter product for the $7 billion asthma market."

The test crops were planted through the North Carolina State University Agricultural Extension Service under the direction of Kings, Inc., a wholly owned subsidiary of Associated British Foods plc (FTSE: ABF), a U.K. company with $6.4 billion in annual revenues. Kings is a leader in the supply-chain management of high-value, specialty plant-derived products, where sustainability, assurety, continuity and traceability are key drivers for its customers. Earlier this year, Pilot signed a supplier and raw materials processing agreement with Kings to provide Pilot with a turnkey approach to supply and process borage and echium for Pilot's pipeline of OTC products and botanical drug candidates.

North Carolina-based Pilot Therapeutics is a specialty pharmaceutical company that is developing and commercializing a robust pipeline of pharmaceutical product candidates and clinically validated over-the-counter (OTC) medical food products. A world leader in fatty acid metabolism, Pilot has pioneered Functional Liponomics (TM), a proprietary, state-of-the-art research platform combining fatty acid and genomic profiling, and has used this research to develop or acquire product candidates for asthma, arthritis, coronary heart disease, cystic acne and cancer. Its lead OTC medical food product, Airozin (TM), is the first clinically proven OTC maintenance product for the dietary management of asthma, a disease that afflicts approximately 20 million Americans. Pilot is in the process of filing an Investigational Drug Application (IND) for its lead pharmaceutical product candidate, PLT 732 to treat elevated triglycerides associated with heart disease, diabetes, and stroke. The company's common stock is traded on the Over-the-Counter Bulletin Board under the ticker symbol "PLTT.OB."

Would You Like Interferon With That?

AMARILLO, Texas — Some of the most significant medical advances in recent decades have come in the area of drug delivery systems — the time-release capsule, the oral contraceptive, the transdermal patch, the french fry...the french fry??!

Well, maybe not quite yet — but it could happen soon if an option agreement announced by Amarillo Biosciences, Inc. (OTC Bulletin Board: AMAR), bears fruit. The agreement — signed by AMAR with scientists, a research institute, a biochemical company, and an agricultural cooperative in Japan — will seek to exploit a recent discovery involving the transgenic delivery of human interferon alpha through potato plants.

Japanese researchers found that two subtypes of human interferon alpha could be expressed in transgenic potato plants (Journal of Interferon and Cytokine Research 21:595-602, 2001). Now, Amarillo Biosciences will help evaluate the commercial possibilities of using such plants to grow potatoes containing human interferon alpha, which can then be fed to humans and animals, thereby efficiently delivering controlled doses of the drug. The potato leaves or tubers will have to be fed raw, because cooking will probably inactivate the interferon.

"This exciting invention fits into our efforts to develop low-dose, orally administered interferon alpha for man and animals," said Dr. Joseph M. Cummins, president and CEO of Amarillo Biosciences. "We are eager to partner with inventors Dr. Chihiro Sugimoto and Dr Takeshi Matsumura; Hayashibara Biochemical Laboratories, Inc.; Hokkaido GreenBio Institute; and Hokuren Federation of Agricultural Cooperatives to commercialize this technology."

Researchers Seeking New Ways To Control Nursery Tree Pest

WOOSTER, Ohio — From soil-applied systemic insecticides to tree guards, Ohio State University entomologists are looking for ways to control one of the most economically damaging insect pests in the nursery industry in Ohio and neighboring states.

The white pine weevil, a North American native that attacks pine and spruce trees, has become more problematic over the past several years, threatening tree nurseries in Ohio and timber industries in states such as Pennsylvania and Michigan.

"The white pine weevil has become the No. 1 pest encountered by Ohio Department of Agriculture nursery inspectors," said Dan Herms, an Ohio State entomologist with the Ohio Agricultural Research and Development Center. "Historically it's been an important pest for the timber and Christmas tree industries in eastern Ohio, but the last couple of years it's really taken off throughout the state, hop-scotching across ornamental landscapes and nurseries."

Herms said the insect emerges in the spring, bores into the terminal, or lead, shoot of the tree and lays eggs under the bark. The larvae hatch and feed on the inside of the tree, causing dieback.

"The insect doesn't kill the tree, but destroys the symmetrical growth pattern that conifers exhibit. The tree forms multiple shoots, looking bushy and asymmetrical," said Herms. "It costs the nursery industry a tremendous amount of money because companies can't sell the tree until it re-establishes itself. A single insect attack can eliminate two to four years of growth. Insect feeding also reduces the quality of trees as saw logs."

Herms said the white pine weevil is a threat to nursery and timber industries because the insect is not so easy to control.

"Methods for control, mainly insecticides, are no longer available, either because the labels have been cancelled by the EPA (Environmental Protection Agency) or it's not economically feasible for companies to carry such products," said Herms. "Plus there is a desire to limit pesticide applications to reduce the risk of human exposure."

With problems of the insect increasing and available effective control methods decreasing, Herms and OARDC entomologist Dave Nielsen have begun a two-year project to find effective, environmentally friendly insecticides, as well as pesticide alternatives, to help keep the white pine weevil in check.

Researchers are currently studying systemic insecticides — chemicals applied to the soil at the base of the tree that are effectively taken up by the plant and protect it from larval feeding.

"Other insecticides used are extremely toxic, but the presence on the market of non-toxic systemic insecticides is a new development," said Herms. "The systemic insecticides offer the advantage of being easier to time their application accurately. Sprays must be timed to coincide with adult emergence during the spring, which is difficult to detect.

"We are studying whether the systemic product, which requires four to six weeks for uptake by the tree, may be effectively applied anytime during the previous fall. Studies with other pests suggest that the fall applications may be effective throughout the next growing season."

Researchers are also studying physical barriers for controlling white pine weevil populations, including the effects of wrapping a plastic tree guard around the terminal shoot to prevent females from laying eggs in the terminal shoot.

"The insects will still be present, but we may be able to prevent them from reproducing," said Herms.

What's against soft paint?

In metal roofing and siding some manufacturers use soft pliable paint to prevent cracks. The disadvantage with softer paint is that it scratches so easy Handling during erection, flying debris during storms, children playing against it, etc can easily scratch softer paint Scratches on softer paints tend to rust prematurely Everlast heat forms to prevent this Ask our competition if they heat form. It's important.

PA farmers have great hay crops with South Dakota alfalfa seed. Painterland Farms, Westfield, PA, John Painter said "The Trask's seed grew extremely well. We recommend it to anyone. It is real leafy and yielded as well as any of the high priced name brand seeds. It cost 40% as much. We planted 294 acres. We intend to plant more this spring. It was exceptionally winter hardy and resisted frost damage. We are very pleased."

Join the numerous farmers in the PA/NY area harvesting superb alfalfa from South Dakota seed

Trust, Respect Key To Successful Farm Business Transfers

Harpster Family Shares Experiences At PDMP Meeting

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

SPRUCE CREEK (Huntingdon Co.) — Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania (PDMP) members gathered earlier this summer to hear both sides of the story from one family who is successfully passing on their dairy business to the younger generation.

The Harpster Family of Evergreen Farms, Inc., hosted the meeting and spoke about the challenges of "Trading Places — Planning For Both Generations."

Parents Wayne and Marjorie Harpster are in the process of handing over management and, eventually, ownership of this 2002 "Dairy of Distinction" that includes a 2,000-cow herd and about 3,000 acres of land to sons Abe, Aaron, and Andy.

One of the keys to bringing the sons into the business is that they were given responsibility early on, according to Andy Harpster, the youngest of the three.

"From a young age, we were given small management decisions." That included handling some of the finances, he said.

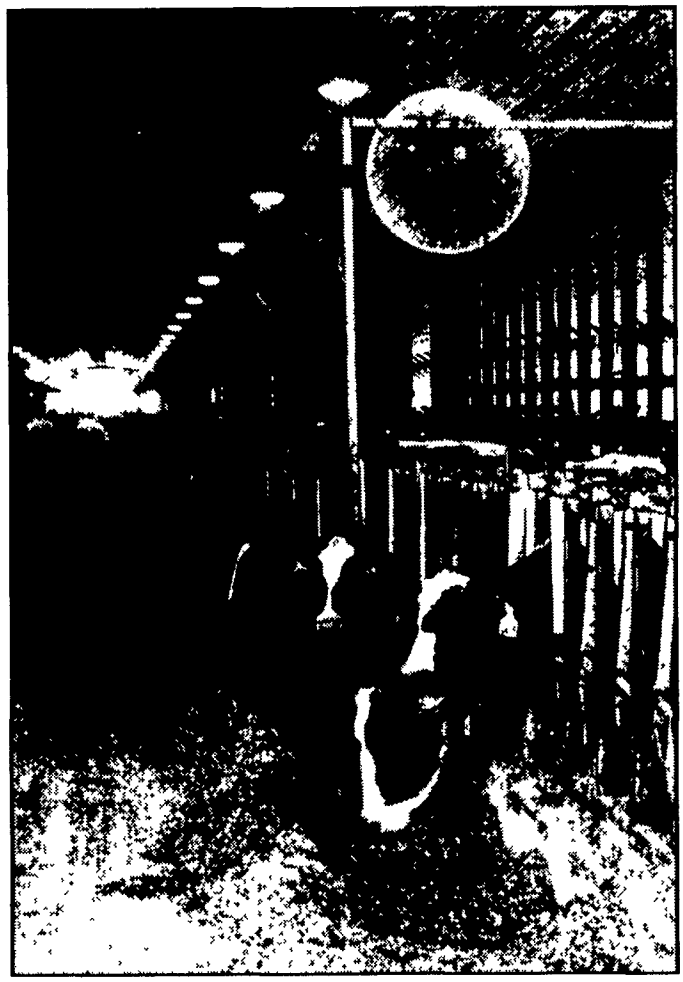
As an example of their parents' trust, oldest son Abe recalled the time Wayne and Marjorie traveled to Africa for a month, leaving the entire farm and herd operation to himself, then 18, and brother Aaron, then 15.

The young brothers were on their own — they couldn't even pick up the phone and call their parents for help if they needed it.

"They were in the bush," Abe said.

The brothers came through that month in spite of some tough challenges, including the temporary loss of a harvest crew due to a conflict.

Andy, left, and Abe Harpster tell stories of being entrusted with various responsibilities at an early age on Evergreen Farms.



PDMP guests had a chance to tour Evergreen Farm facilities, including this 900-foot-long freestall barn, one of two such buildings needed to house the 2,000 milking cows.

Today, all three brothers are partners and shareholders in the operation. Abe is in charge of the milking cows; Aaron manages dry cows, newly fresh cows, and heifers; and Andy handles the crops.

"I think we have the best parents in the world as far as turning over the business and giving us responsibility," Abe said.

According to Abe, it wasn't always obvious the three brothers would become partners in the dairy. In fact, Abe began as a horticulture major at Penn State. Through his college years, however, "he began to see opportunities at home on the dairy," he said.

Andy, a Cornell graduate, also considered other career options before deciding to join the family business. Aaron, another Penn State graduate, was the only one of the three who "everyone knew would be a farmer from the time he was little," Andy said.

Two sisters, who have moved off the farm and are not directly involved in the dairy operation, are also included in the estate planning, Abe said.

Evergreen Farms was first incorporated in the early 1990s when the Harpsters expanded the dairy.

According to Wayne Harpster, having the dairy business incorporated has served as "a good tool" for managing finances. In the future, he expects to establish a limited liability corporation (L.L.C) with real estate included to continue the transfer process to his children.

Wayne's father originally owned the home farm, but was a car dealer by trade, Wayne said. That makes Abe, Aaron, and Andy second-generation farmers.

Abe acknowledged the common belief that transferring a farm business to the third generation is often the most difficult. In the case of Evergreen Farms, estate planning is being structured to include the third generation, "if they want to farm," he said. At this point, the three brothers are unmarried and without children.

The family contracted with "the very best" estate planners in order "to maximize what our parents get without strapping cash flow," Andy said. "We want to buy this thing fair and square and our parents to live happily ever after."

According to Wayne, a love of the land and the dairy business played a big part in in the decision to pass on the farm.

"I've always had love for the valley and the land. I could have sold (the land) for real estate and lived comfortably," he said.

When it comes to making dairy business decisions, "You got to be a businessman first, then a farmer," he said. He also offered this advice to other farmers who may be transferring their farm operations: "Don't get out of it too fast."

Gary Snider, Farm Credit of Western New York, added a financier's perspective to the topic of farm business transfers.

"There are risks in transferring a business," he said.

Snider stressed the need for clear communication between generations. Those stepping into management roles need to show respect to their elders, and those turning the business over must exercise trust in the younger generation, he said.

While each generation may have different ideas and management styles, it's important to realize that "both sides are right," he said.

"It's very easy for Mom and Dad to become very conservative when it's time to hand over the farm," he said. This may cause them to distrust the younger generation's energy and ideas. Snider urged the older generation to let go of this skepticism. "Trust," he said. That includes developing and nurturing leadership many years before the day the children take over the business.

By the same token, the younger generation must respect those who developed and managed the business before them.

"If you want this thing to be successful, you're going to have to bend over backward to be respectful to your parents," he said.

Snider urged family members to develop and write down goals for their farm business. He cited a Wall Street Journal article that reported businesses with written goals had nine times the income of businesses with no goals, and three times that of businesses with unwritten goals.

PDMP members listen to advice on how to successfully negotiate a farm business transfer.

L.L.C.s are today's trend, offering simplicity, flexibility, and some liability protection in partnerships, Snider said.

In a "perfect world farm transfer," a younger generation family member would work off the farm for two to three years, then work as an employee on the farm before an L.L.C. is started on operating assets, according to Snider.

Initially, a younger member should have a small percentage of assets in the L.L.C., with a goal of reaching 50 percent in five to seven years. As the first retirement step, the older member should transfer L.L.C. interest, then, as the second step, sell the real estate.

National Dairy Shrine Names Students For Recognition Awards

Dorshorst, Iager Take Top Rankings

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Each year the National Dairy Shrine sponsors a contest for graduating college seniors who are planning a career related to dairy-production agriculture and who excel in leadership skills, academic ability and show keen interest in dairy cattle. This year's 'Top Ten' will receive their recognition and cash awards during Dairy Shrine's Awards Banquet on Oct. 3 at the World Dairy Expo, Madison, Wis.

Nathan Dorshorst, Junction City, Wis., is the 2002 first-place award winner. A graduate of the University of Wisconsin, Dorshorst majored in dairy science and will begin his first year in Madison's School of Veterinary Medicine this fall. Ultimately, he hopes to own and operate a successful dairy farm.

Dorshorst fosters a strong commitment to the dairy industry, illustrated by his long list of achievements and involvement with 4-H, the Holstein Association, Badger Dairy Club and the judging team. Dorshorst wins a $1,500 cash award that will be presented Oct. 3 at World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

Winning $1,000 for second place is Amy Iager of Fulton, Md., and an honors graduate of Virginia Tech. Armed with a degree in dairy science and a chemistry minor, Iager plans to work a year and a half as a legislative assistant for the Federation of Animal Science Societies Scientific Liaison Division in Washington, D.C., then go on to graduate school and study dairy cattle transgenics.

Warburtons Adapt To Grazing Profits, Lifestyle

Family Built Inexpensive Parlor In Old Stall Barn

CAROLYN N. MOYER
Tioga Co. Correspondent

FORKSVILLE (Sullivan Co.) — "Every grazier does things a little bit differently and there's usually a reason why," said Jim Warburton, a dairyman who farms near the southern tip of Sullivan County.

The Warburtons began farming in partnership with Jim's parents in 1960. His father, grandfather and great grandfather farmed in the same area. In 1988, Jim and his wife, Barbara, took over the 325-acre operation.

In their early years of farming, the Warburtons ran a conventional operation. Although the cows had access to pasture, it was not considered a primary source of nutrition. Today, the Warburtons are sold on the benefits of grazing, both for their pocket books and their lifestyle.

The Warburtons made the jump to rotational grazing in 1995, after hearing good reports from other farmers who had traveled the same route and after their accountant suggested they try a different approach.

"We weren't making any money and we were always fixing something. Then our accountant talked about grazing. We're in the Farm Bureau accounting program and he made some suggestions and we tried it.

Cows are on fresh grass every 12 hours at the Warburton Farm, operated by Jim and Barbara Warburton of Sullivan County.

"The first year was a disaster," he said. "We didn't really know what we were doing. We didn't get the cows out early enough. We didn't get the fence built early enough and we were trying to feed TMR and graze. A lot of people do it, but it didn't work for us the first year."

The next year they got the cows out by April 15 and added water tanks. Every year since, they have made more improvements to fine-tune their operation. Polywire separates paddocks, and the cows are on fresh grass every 12 hours. Jim mows the pastures as needed and usually fertilizes with urea early in the spring, mid-summer and in the fall. Some of the pastures have been frost-seeded with clover.

"It's been a learning process," he said. "The longer we're grazing, we see the sod getting more dense and thicker. This is working well for us."

In the switch to grazing, the Warburtons also retired their corn planter and made changes in the cow's diets.

"He hasn't planted corn for three years," said Barbara. "The cows get no corn silage."

The only equipment parked in the shed is a manure spreader and haymaking equipment, including a new round baler purchased this summer, a diskbine and a bale wrapper.

"It's working," said Jim. "In these northern counties, we can grow grass if we can't grow anything else. We can pretty well feed the cows on pasture for six months."

Baleage and grass hay make up the bulk of the ration during the other six months. Throughout the year, the cows also receive a commercial grain ration, which is carefully balanced to complement the grass the cows are eating.

In the switch to grazing, herd health has improved dramatically and the culling rate has decreased.

"Our vet expense is way down, and our cull rate is way down. We don't cull much for production. We're not very concerned about making records," said Jim.

Added Barbara, "We've been able to sell a lot of replacements, because we don't need them. We're trying to increase the Jerseys, so we've sold a lot of Holsteins as bred heifers or yearlings." "We just sold a dozen to Minnesota," said Jim.

Of the 115 cows, 70 are Jerseys and the rest are Holsteins or cross-bred.

"We bought about 15 Jerseys quite a few years ago from Bill Eick. We started to switch then because if anyone watched what was going on, they knew that we would be soon be getting paid for the protein," said Jim.

Calves are raised in a greenhouse barn and receive lots of tender loving care from Barbara.

"That was when Jerseys were cheap," said Barbara. "The highest we paid was $650 and we had mainly first calf heifers and a couple of older cows.

The Warburtons are making the switch to Jerseys and cross bred cows because of their willingness to graze. They also love the heartiness of the crossbred

Genex Signs Agreement with Dansire

SHAWANO, Wis. — Genex Cooperative has reached an agreement with Dansire of Denmark to be the exclusive marketing agent of Danish Jersey semen in the U.S. and Canada. Dansire is responsible for all international marketing of Danish genetics. Their top proven bulls are very comparable to U.S. genetics on Lifetime Net Merit or Cheese Merit.

By adding Danish Jersey genetics to its sire offering, Genex will make available to Jersey breeders in the U.S. and Canada outcross pedigrees (some Danish bulls have little or no U.S. bloodlines), higher percent fat and protein, and evaluations on health traits and fertility.

According to Steve Schnell, vice president of Dairy Genetics for Genex, "the addition of Danish genetics to the Genex Jersey lineup will add additional diversity and strength to the already powerful Genex Jersey sire lineup.

"In my previous barn, I scraped two times a day; and I was tired of it, not to mention the danger to the cows if a cable snapped. I thought I would not be able to justify the additional cost until my builder suggested a design change which brought the cost down relatively close to the original design.

The biggest benefit to me is the labor savings. Two people can handle all the chores for our herd. I save money not only on labor but also on repairs.

The cows' hooves are healthier, and they show heat better because they are not afraid of slipping. During the five years with slats, I have not lost a single heifer from slipping. The cows stay much cleaner, even with my misting system for cooling them. The water has a place to escape."

- Raymond Good
Good's Dairy Farm

"We would use slats again if doing it all over!"

"Our original plan was to install scrapers. But after 10 minutes in a slatted barn in Somerset County, we changed our minds. Some people stay away from slats because of the initial cost, but that extra cost is made up for in the first couple years.

The one thing I like the most about slats is that there is no expense. I don't have any scrapers or drive units to maintain. I don't have to run scrapers every day or haul manure like we did in our previous tie stall barn. The cows' foot health has been a lot better, and the cows stay much cleaner. Our milk production is up and the somatic cell count has gone down. I give at least some of the credit to the slats because with less moisture on the floor, there is less bacteria." animals.

The herd is milked in a double-six herringbone parlor that was retrofitted into the original milking barn two years ago. The Warburtons did much of the work themselves. Before building the parlor, they milked in 26 stalls with 13 units, switching cows. At that time they were milking between 130 and 140 cows.

"It cost us around $45,000 to do it. We can milk about 100 cows in less than two hours," said Jim. "You don't have to spend a fortune on a parlor." Herd averages for the Holsteins run around 16,000 pounds of milk, while the Jerseys produce between 12,000 and 13,000 pounds.

"We calved a lot of heifers in the past few years and quite often, especially with the Holsteins, we sell the best and milk the rest," said Jim.

Calves are raised in a greenhouse barn and in hutches and receive special attention from Barbara.

Grazing for the Warburtons has been, in many ways, the answer to their prayers. Although they have a hired hand to help with the milking, the Warburtons do the bulk of the work themselves. Their three children and spouses, Bruce and Sandy, Amy and Nick, and Brian and Eileen, work off the farm, but sons Bruce and Brian help when they can. Jim's father is also around the farm daily.

Besides running the farm, Jim and Barbara also find lots of time to be involved in other activities. Jim is a newly elected director of Dairy Farmers of America (DFA) for Bradford and Sullivan Counties. In his spare time, Jim attends pasture walks and tells everyone who will listen about "Project Grass," an educational program that promotes pasturing.

Barb works three days a week at a local Dairy Queen, has been a 4-H leader for 18 years and is on the state women's committee for Farm Bureau.

If anyone asked them for advice on farming, their first response is to not spend a lot of money.

"There are so many people who are just barely hanging on and trying to survive farming. I think they could benefit from grazing if they went at it. It's been really good to us," he said. "If I had done it 10 or 20 years ago, I could think about retiring now," said Jim.

Dairy Herd Benchmark Data Released

CAMP HILL (Cumberland Co.) — MSC Business Services, the consulting division of Pennsylvania Farm Bureau (PFB), recently released an analysis of dairy herd statistics. The report, which was co-produced by AgChoice and MidAtlantic Farm Credit, includes data gathered from PFB's records program, as well as information on dairy herds throughout the entire Northeast region.

"Our mission as an organization is to help farmers maximize their profitability, which is especially important in the current dairy environment," said Mike Evanish, manager of MSC Business Services. "Analyzing this data and comparing the numbers found regionally to those found in a dairyman's individual herd, can be a great management tool."

Evanish said the statistics are particularly helpful because they have been broken down by herd size, allowing a dairyman to compare key data — such as net income per cow — to other herds of the same size, both in Pennsylvania and herds throughout the Northeast.

"As interesting as some of the numbers are," said Evanish, "the real key to using this resource is as part of a consultation with a business professional from MSC Business Services or the appropriate Farm Credit Association. Our staff knows how the numbers were derived, and what formulas were used to determine the final ratios. By working with someone from MSC or Farm Credit, the dairyman can ensure that he is comparing apples to apples."

A limited number of copies of the report are available from the following organizations: MSC Business Services, AgChoice Farm Credit, and MidAtlantic Farm Credit. To find the office nearest you, please refer to the following Websites: www.pfb.com, www.agchoice.com and www.midatlanticfarmcredit.com.

Jewart Family Cuts Milking Time In Half With New Setup

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HOME (Indiana Co.) — For many years, the Jewart family milked their cows in a flat, 12-stanchion barn, requiring at least two workers and taking about six hours per milking.

Renovations two years ago, including a new parallel double-8 parlor and electronic crowd gate, have cut that milking time in half for the 150-cow herd.

Not only does the setup allow eye-level milking from the rear of the cow and provide four more units than the old system did, it has also eliminated the need for humans to be continually chasing cows in and out of the milking area.

"You can just about milk in the same amount of time with one person as with two," said Jayne Jewart, who helps manage the dairy along with husband Ed and his brother Ron Jewart.

In addition to the crowd gate, which moves cows forward in the holding area at the push of a button, the new setup includes "lots of gates" in cow areas to allow ease of handling and access.

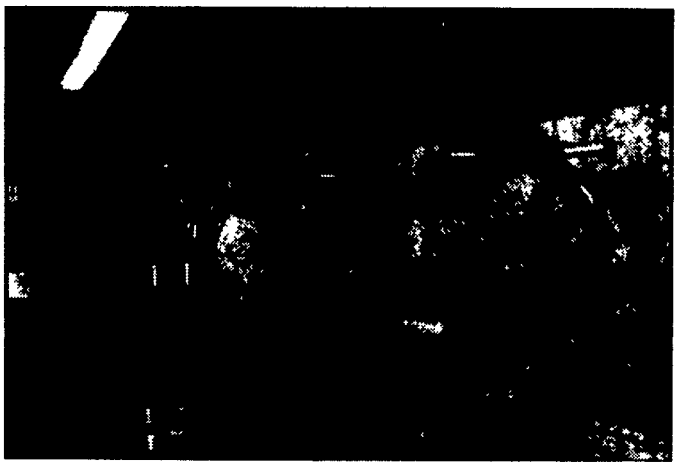
"If something happens, we can get to the cows quickly," Jewart said.

Other features of the setup include a roll-up curtain that separates the parlor from the holding area. The parlor is also designed to release either four or eight cows at a time.

The Jewarts are so pleased with the new facility that they scheduled an open house for Sept. 21 so others could have a look.

The tour also offered a variety of demonstrations and information, including a feedstuffs display, animals for feeding and petting, West Nile virus information, manure handling and soil testing information, lawn mower safety demonstrations, a vegetable canning display, beekeeping and honey extraction display, and spinning and weaving demonstrations.

In the Jewart's parlor, cows can be released four or eight at a time.



Ed and Ron Jewart work in their double-8 parallel parlor. The new setup, which includes an electronic crowd gate, has reduced labor significantly on the Indiana County farm.

LOL, Davisco Foods Partner In S.D. Cheese Plant

NORDEN, S.D. — Davisco Foods International recently broke ground on a $40 million mozzarella cheese plant adjacent to its food ingredient plant in Lake Norden, S.D.

The new dairy plant will initially support the milk production from 30,000 cows and eventually expand to require the milk production from 75,000 cows.

Land O'Lakes, Inc. will market the cheese produced at the new plant, and will partner with Davisco Foods International in milk procurement for the plant.

"This is a major investment for us at Davisco that represents an expanded partnership between the state of South Dakota, Lake Norden, Davisco, Land O'Lakes, and area milk producers," said Mark Davis, CEO of Davisco Foods International."

Land O'Lakes President and CEO Jack Gherty said. "In today's highly competitive dairy industry environment, size, scale and operating efficiency are critical to success. The new plant, and our supply and marketing agreement, address all three of those issues."

Kohl Urges Dairy Leaders To Look Toward Future

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — A major reason good dairy managers fail to pass their farm business on to the next generation is because they have not accumulated wealth.

That was the message from Dr. David Kohl, Virginia Tech professor and internationally-known ag economist.

Kohl spoke at a recent forum called "Managing Tomorrow's Agriculture Today" sponsored by Monsanto Dairy Business.

Younger family members on farms that have not accumulated assets over the years "can't survive managing the way (the older members) do," he said.

Kohl travels extensively, urging farmers and agribusiness people to take a "proactive" approach in creating a business environment that will attract up-and-coming generations.

"It is a big challenge to get Gen-X'ers to commit to dairying," Kohl said, referring to the generation of Americans now in their 20s and 30s.

Beside the challenge of keeping young people on farms that seem to offer too little in return for a large commitment, young people also tend to avoid living in economically depressed communities, including rural areas with failing farms. Ninety-five percent choose communities with thriving schools and retail centers, rather than places where the high school has closed, equipment dealers have shut down, and most of the population is older people, Kohl said.

Kohl outlined some generational differences that may help in understanding family farm dynamics. For example, Gen-X'ers tend to have a more "balanced" approach to work in contrast to the "driven" work ethic of some of their elders. Gen-X'ers also tend to be more skeptical in their outlook compared to the optimistic tendencies of their parents, he pointed out.

Dairy operations, like other businesses, need a net income growth rate of at least five percent to be sustainable — but managers should aim for eight percent growth to cover inflation and other variables, according to Kohl.

One problem, especially with dairies in the East, is that "producers become too spinster," Kohl said, referring to an unwillingness to risk money on the operation. Dairy producers in the East tend to have equity in their operations ranging from 40-80 percent compared those in the West, where equity runs from 30-50 percent.

Some West Coast producers can also get into trouble with rapid growth, Kohl noted. When equity dips under 50 percent, "That is called — 'you better have your linebackers in place,'" he said.

He also touched on the implications of the Farm Bill, including the new dairy subsidies.

"It's really opening up a can of worms," he said of the dairy program. The effect on supply and demand, he said, will prove "not good for ag in the long run."

According to Kohl, "The Farm Bill is basically plugging a hole in the dike," by maintaining cash flows and keeping land values up. Land values in the Midwest would decrease 22-28 percent without the Farm Bill, he pointed out.

The farm commodity subsidies also create a "flashpoint for international trade wars," he said.

According to Kohl, the new bill brought no "major changes" to ag policy for now, but set the stage for future farm bills to be "very environmental."

"Environmental issues will intensify tenfold in the next Farm Bill," he predicted.

The meeting also featured a presentation by Dr. Jeffrey Brose, technical service specialist with Monsanto Dairy Business.

Brose highlighted the need for dairy producers to make the most of their facilities and to think of cows as production assets.

"When (producers) are hesitant to fill a barn, it's much more costly to have that barn empty," Brose said. "Keep the slots filled with the most productive animals."

LITITZ (Lancaster Co.) — Nevin and Denise Horning are unique in this day of escalating land costs and fickle milk prices. Neither Nevin nor Denise were raised on farms, but today this young couple own 55 acres of prime Lancaster County farmland, 90 milking cows, and replacements.

How did they attain a farm without the benefit of taking over a family-owned operation?

"It was meant to be," Denise said with a bit of awe still evident in her voice from the purchase that took place in 2001.

"Meant To Be Farm" is the farm's working name.

Denise explained that the original owners had purchased a larger farm and thought they would need to sell the Lititz one. After selling it to the Hornings, the original owners found out they did not need to sell it afterall, and voiced their confusion to their listing real estate agent.

"It was meant to be," the Hornings maintain of the farm that is an answer to their prayers and to biblical scripture Jeremiah 29:11: "'For I know the plans that I have for you,' declares the Lord, 'plans to for welfare and not for calamity to give you a future and a hope.'"

The answer to their prayers was actually the unfolding of an 11-year quest.

As a teen-ager, Nevin started out working for his dairy farm uncle. It wasn't long before he knew he wanted dairy farming as his life's vocation. Soon he was working as a herdsman for another farmer, and eventually purchased the small herd. The Hornings rented a farm for several years until they needed to move because the landlord's son wanted to take over the farm.

That's when the Hornings discovered their present location, which had been operated as a hog farm. The Hornings weren't interested in hog farming, but the 170-sow operation was in place and a viable business.

Monica and Vanessa like caring for the calves on the family farm.

So a made-to-order setup was put into place. Nevin's younger brother Lewis and his wife Amy manage the hog operation and also help with milking.

The Hornings erected a 40X80-feet 80-cow tiestall tunnel-ventilated barn. They moved their original herd of 45 cows and purchased an addition 32 cows placed on a three-times-a-day milking schedule.

According to Beth Trachte, who takes care of the veterinarian work for the Hornings, the family attained a proven track record while renting their former farm, and have experienced remarkable success within a short period of time at their new place. The 32 cows that they had purchased locally had only been averaging 74 pounds, but increased to 96-pound average within 60 days.

In fact, the rolling herd average is 31,076 pounds and climbing.

"They are self-started people, highly motivated, and pay attention to detail and consistency, and still manage to keep things simple," Trachte said of the Hornings.

Nevin said that adapting to a new setup took some time, changes are still being made, and obstacles are being worked out.

One of the problems they faced at the new facility was that it was more difficult to detect heat because the herd has been kept in the barn. But recently a dry lot was completed, and Nevin expects it to be much easier to detect cows in heat. The calving interval is 13.7 months.

The herd is fed total mixed rations two times daily but feed is provided four times daily.

The Hornings have used BST since February 1994. They have 1.4 services per pregnancy and 1.6 for all cows, which is considered excellent, according to Trachte. Lancaster County averages are 2.2 and 2.9 service. The 21-day pregnancy rate is 17 percent compared with the county average of 11-12 percent.

In addition to the newly-built barn, two silos, feed bins, and a manure pit were installed. A dry cow barn is attached to the new one. Heifers are raised adjacent to the new barn.

They raise corn and alfalfa hay and purchase forages from neighboring farmers to whom they are able to sell manure.

One of the Hornings' top priorities is to work together as a family. Although their children range in ages from four to 11 years, each helps out on the farm in a responsibility they enjoy.

"Destinee loves the barn. She'd rather be there than in the house. She's up at 6 a.m.," her mother said.

"I like helping with milking," Destinee said. So does her 9-year-old sister Marcia. Her twin, Monica, prefers scraping the barn. The younger children like to help with calf care.

"The farm is a good place to raise a family," Denise said. "The farm is a business — and needs to be operated as one — but to keep it going, we need to take time away from it."

The Hornings recently returned from a three-day camping trip. While they were gone, Lewis and Amy took care of the herd in addition to their daily care of the hog operation.

This month the Hornings will have an all-expense paid trip to Minnesota as Land O' Lakes young producers.

Originally the families hope to arrange an every-other weekend off. But the three-times daily milking schedule makes that unrealistic. "It's just too much work for one family," Denise said.

During a recent open house on the Horning's farm, Jay Mylin of Lancaster DHIA said that he is impressed by the Hornings' ability to maintain professionalism and yet operate it as a family farm.

The Hornings' mission statement is to provide high quality dairy products at a profit, follow Godly principles of honesty, integrity, and good stewardship, provide a healthy family atmosphere, and be a positive influence in the community.

When people asked the Hornings why they have been able to achieve so much success including a high rolling herd average, they said, "We are trying to do the best we can do, to make our steps count, to work together as a family, and to build long-term relationships with professionals that can help us live in accordance to our mission statement."

DFA Web Site Hosts Checkoff News

As part of a joint partnership between DFA and Dairy Management Inc. (DMI), the organization that manages the national dairy checkoff programs, DFA producer members can get the latest checkoff information when visiting the DFA official website at www.dfamilk.com.

A special link "button" located in the lower right section of the DFA home page links DFA members to the latest checkoff-funded promotion and marketing programs aimed at building dairy product demand.

"We're excited about this opportunity to partner with DFA in producer communications," said Joe Bavido, director of industry relations for DMI.

According to Agi Schafer, DFA vice president of communications, DFA's web traffic is growing and generating an increased amount of questions from producers and consumers about dairy farmer-funded promotions.

"With that in mind, it just made sense to partner with DMI to make answers quick and easy to find. It also gives consumers an access point for dairy promotion's home page information," said Schafer.

Housing For Milking Robots

Robert E. Graves
Agricultural,
Biological, and Engineering Extension
Penn State

Housing facilities for automatic milking systems (AMS) or robotic milking systems (RMS) have similar requirements as any other system. Cows must be kept clean, dry and comfortable (CDC). Ventilation, freestall, and walking surface requirements are all familiar to us. Cow cleanliness, including feet and lower legs is essential because at this time robots cannot determine the cleanliness of the cow. The milking robot will use the same, consistent cleaning and preparation routine for all cows. After this procedure the milking units are attached, clean teats or not. Therefore a housing system that fosters clean cows is essential.

Robots milk cows all day, so cows will be found in all parts of the housing system at all times. Therefore, the manure removal system must be able to operate while cows are present. Alley scrapers and slotted floors are most common. Stall maintenance and bedding addition are other important chores that must be done while cows are present. If stall maintenance is inadequate, dirty cows will result.

To encourage regular visits to the robot by the cows, a short convenient path to the robot is necessary. A robot location that the cow must pass before getting to the feed area is normal. In some instances, one-way gates will force the cow to visit the robot before she can gain access to the feed area (forced cow flow). Because cows visit the robot on an individual basis, there may be less group activity. This may mean that less feed space is required per cow because they are less likely to all be eating at one time. It's too early to tell if this is true.

The milking side of the robot needs to be in a well ventilated, non-freezing, fly free area. This area can be considered an extension of the milk room. Operator access between the milk room and the robot must be manure and mud free. A short distance to the milk room is desirable to minimize milk line length. For those wanting to use existing facilities the same rules apply. The cow must be kept clean, dry and comfortable. The more costly it is to achieve proper housing conditions the less desirable the existing facilities are. DWD (dirty, wet and disturbed) cows are not conducive to automatic milking systems. Remember, milking robots will milk dirty cows!

PDMP To Present Nutrient Management Tips

MARTINSBURG (Blair Co.) — The Kulp Family Dairy, Inc., and the Professional Dairy Managers of Pennsylvania (PDMP) invite dairy producers and advisors to attend "Balancing Act" — Reality and Responsibilities of Nutrient Management, a PDMP Membership Meeting to be conducted at the dairy and at Morrison's Cove Memorial Park on Oct. 10.

Phil Kulp, partner in the 1,300-cow dairy, will talk about his component system, stewardship, and community relations. Phil admits the learning curve is steep, "I can't possibly know all the regulations and I don't know everything about managing the separate components," he said.

Phil's nutrient management advisors, Bill Fink with TeamAg, Marty Campfield from Nutrient Solutions, Inc., and Steve Shaw from Cargill will be speaking about how the Kulps are implementing regulations, collecting and utilizing data, and testing phosphorus-based feeding. Alyssa Dodd, Agricultural Environmental Policy expert from Penn State Cooperative Extension, will help dairy producers sort through the regulations and offer resources.

The cost for this meeting is $10 for PDMP members and $50 for non-members. The program runs from 8:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. Lunch is included. Contact PDMP or one of the sponsors for a special rate for producers who are interested in joining the organization.

Reservations are required. Please send your payment and RSVP by Oct. 1 to Tammy Perkins: 324 Henning Building, University Park, PA 16802 or call toll free at (888) 373-7232, fax (814) 865-4686, or e-mail at tap10@psu.edu.

Milking Robots

Whether new or existing, housing facilities for use with milking robots must promote clean comfortable cows with a desire to walk and visit the robot. Cows with mobility problems or dirty cows will seriously impact the productivity of the robot. Robot location must also consider access for the operator and assure that the environment around the milking side of the robot is clean, well ventilated and free from flies. Always consider flexibility for future changes such as addition of more cows and robots or even removal of the robot and installation of a conventional parlor. Who knows what the future will bring?

Westfalia Sells 15 Rotary Parlor Systems To China

NAPERVILLE, Ill. — Westfalia•Surge, Inc. announced the recent sale by Westfalia Landtechnik GmbH of 15 Autorotor Carousel 48-stall parlors and 50 cooling tanks plus all associated equipment and services to the Fujin Changfu Group in China. The sale, valued at nearly $4 million, represents one of the largest single sales in the global dairy equipment industry.

Westfalia Landtechnik, located in Oelde, Germany, introduced the first Westfalia Chinese Autorotor Carousel parlor at an official commissioning ceremony in July 2002, where Dr. Anton Daubner, CEO of Westfalia Landtechnik Group and Chen Xuekun, president of Changfu Group, signed the supply agreement for the additional systems. A total of 15 Autorotor Carousel parlors and 50 milk cooling tanks will be delivered and installed by June 2003.

According to Daubner, "China offers the largest growth potential anywhere in the world for our company. The Westfalia brand is well recognized and respected in China. We expect to rapidly expand our presence in China through a new subsidiary company."

Jersey Groups Step Up Promotion

REYNOLDSBURG, Ohio —Delivering the message that registered Jerseys are the most profitable choice for today's dairy operators will be the primary task of a new department recently announced by Neal Smith, executive secretary and CEO of the American Jersey Cattle Association and National All-Jersey Inc.

"The timing is right for us to step up our promotion of the Jersey breed and to more effectively communicate the efficiencies of the Jersey cow to commercial milk producers," Smith said, in announcing the creation of the development department to be directed by Cherie L. Bayer.

"We intend to improve general awareness of what the Jersey cow can do for milk producers, and what the Jersey organizations can deliver to help them make the greatest profit in their dairy businesses," Smith said.

First Klussendorf Scholarships Won By Ayars And Sanders

Ohio, Pa. Youth To Be Honored At World Dairy Expo

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The Arthur B. Klussendorf Memorial Association has announced the results of its first Klussendorf Scholarship Awards contest.

Students already attending college and majoring in dairy/animal husbandry responded strongly to the contest. In addition to satisfactory academic standing, leadership and extracurricular activities, a special interest in showing and fitting dairy cattle received special consideration.

Contest judges were impressed by the winners as young men who will uphold the character and ethics tradition of legendary dairy cattle showman and fitter, the late Klussendorf.

The two $1,000 scholarships are made possible by a generous gift from late Klussendorf member, Chris Kampf.

Lucas J. Ayars of Land of Living Farm, Mechanicsburg, Ohio, will be a junior at Ohio State University this fall, majoring in animal science. Ayars has had considerable experience and success on the home farm, at the shows and at college, where he is active in showing, fitting and judging contests, as well as in the Buckeye Dairy Club. He has also been an officer and director of the Ohio Junior Guernsey Association. Ayars was in charge of the home farm's show strings of 23 and 12 head at the 2001 Ohio State Fair and World Dairy Expo, respectively.

Joshua E. Sanders, Littlestown, Pa., will start his final year at Delaware Valley College this fall, majoring in dairy science. Sanders has already developed a fast growing business, JS Cattle Prep. He is an assistant herdsman at his uncle's Locust-Ayr Farm and during the school year, works with the college herd and at Indian Valley Holsteins. He owns 10 head of Holsteins, as well as part interest in two syndicated animals. He is active in college events and societies including the Dairy Society Consignment Sale, Block and Bridle, and Alpha Gamma Rho. Sanders was also second high individual in the 1999 Maryland State 4-H Dairy Cattle Judging Contest.

Ayars and Sanders will be honored at National Dairy Shrine's banquet on Oct. 3 during the World Dairy Expo in Madison, Wis.

Learn From Others to Prepare for Tighter Nutrient Restrictions

Travis Edwards
Penn State Research Technologist

On Sept. 4 and 5, I had the opportunity to tour several farms on the Delmarva Peninsula in Delaware and Maryland. My main interest when touring these farms was to learn what they were doing to manage farm waste, given the tough environmental restrictions that farms in that area face.

While most farms have very effective manure treatment facilities in place, accompanied by very sound nutrient management plans, they still need to develop an emphasis on phosphorus (P) management. Most of the herds have reduced ration levels of P, and overall, are ahead of the original timeline for reducing nutrient flow into the Chesapeake Bay region. However, many producers in the area know that the land base they are working with will not be able to handle the amount of P contained in the manure. The land is already at the limit of P concentration, so in the future manure will have to be shipped off of the farm.

At the heart of the new restrictions and interest in nutrient management is the Chesapeake Bay. The bay is the largest estuary in the U.S. at 2300 square miles, half of its water from the Atlantic, and the rest from 64,000 square miles of watershed, including areas in six states and Washington, D.C.

In 1976, suspicions of declining water quality in the bay and its tributaries led to a six-year study of water quality of the bay. The EPA coordinated about 40 different studies on declining water quality, and its effects on wildlife and plant population. It was concluded from these initial studies to set a goal of nutrient reduction of about 40 percent, based on the 1985 status. Nutrients entering the bay would now be very restricted.

In 1987, the states of Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and the District of Columbia, along with the EPA and Chesapeake Bay Commission, formed the Chesapeake Bay Agreement. This agreement set the goal to achieve nutrient reduction in the bay by the year 2000.

In 1989, the University of Maryland/Maryland Cooperative Extension, and the Maryland Department of Agriculture drafted the Maryland Nutrient Management Program. The focus of this program was to unite the 1.4 million acres of farmland in Maryland under nutrient management plans by the year 2000. However, in 1998, the Maryland government enacted the Water Quality Improvement Act, which mandated sweeping changes for the Maryland agricultural community and land managers. This new act requires the following: nitrogen and P based nutrient management plans; reduction of the phosphorus in manure via feeding changes; provisions for moving manure from fields having excessive P to fields needing additional nutrients; increased monitoring of record keeping; and more evaluations of the nutrient P.

Some of the highlights of the new act are as follows (source: University of Maryland Cooperative Extension):

- An operator who uses biosolids or animal manure in an agricultural operation shall develop a nutrient management plan addressing nitrogen as the limiting nutrient on that agricultural operation by December 31, 2001, and implement the plan by December 31, 2002.
- An operator who uses biosolids or animal manure in an agricultural operation shall develop a nutrient management plan addressing both nitrogen and phosphorus as the limiting nutrients on that agricultural operation by July 1, 2004, and implement the plan by July 1, 2005.
- An operator who uses a combination of chemical fertilizer, biosolids, and animal manure in an agricultural operation shall comply with the deadlines above if that operator uses biosolids or animal manure on a minimum of 10 acres, or 50 percent of an agricultural operation, whichever is less. Phosphorus application rates under this subsection shall follow cooperative extension recommendation rates on individual fields where chemical fertilizer is the only nutrient source.
- The plans must be prepared by a certified nutrient management consultant and according to the schedule set forth in the new regulations. The most limiting nutrient in the soil will be determined as an indicator for potential pollution problems. If the sample scores less than 150 on the phosphorus fertility index, nitrogen will be the limiting factor. If it is 150 or greater, a P index risk assessment method will be used to determine the potential risk of P loss. If the risk scores low, nitrogen needs may be used. If the risk is medium, according to the test, nitrogen may be used one out of every three years. If the risk is high, P amounts will be limited to those expected to be removed from the field by the crop or harvest. If the site risk is very high, no additional P may be applied.

While touring the Delmarva Peninsula, I had the opportunity to tour large and small dairies, conventional and grazing, and none of the farms visited were ready for the new P restrictions as far as having a plan in place. As I had mentioned, most had reduced the ration level of P, but had not yet based the nutrient management system on P. Those that seemed most prepared were the farms that were equipped with separator systems, and have made arrangements to sell the solids or compost off of the farm. Years of unmonitored manure application have left their soils saturated with P, especially those areas close to barns or slurry gun discharge.

At one dairy, the producer collected all runoff from the farm including rainwater from concrete lots, as well as all manure. It was then separated, and the solids were either spread, or sold to an area vegetable farmer. The separation process allows for timelier and site specific application of manure. Plans are to develop more outside uses for the solid manure, to adapt to new P regulations. He had also reduced P ration levels to .4 percent for the 150 head of Holsteins, feeding slightly over NRC for a "safety factor".

At another dairy, the previous owners had overused the slurry gun on the area around the main farm, and consequently, P levels in the soil are very high. They also use a separator system in conjunction with composting to dispose of waste from their herd of 700 Holsteins. However, under a P-based management plan, they will no longer be allowed to spread the compost on the home farm due to its P content. Plans are to export the compost to an area corn silage supplier.

The problem is not limited to conventionally fed Holsteins, either. One of the farms visited was a smaller dairy using intensive grazing on 55 acres, with 65 dairy cows. Careful monitoring of pasture soil last year showed that the ground had accrued 15-20 lbs of P per acre in one year. P is fed at a moderate .35 percent of the ration DM, and no additional supplement is used. They are actively monitoring and controlling P waste. Much of the manure stored in the pit will have to be exported from the farm.

The last stop of the tour was a farm milking about 1,200 cows and farming roughly 1,400 acres of land. Nutrient regulations were not of any concern at the moment. The facility is equipped with a separator system, enabling them to reclaim sand for bedding. Also, ground is double cropped with corn and small grains every year, so nutrient (mostly nitrogen) is used quickly. However, the producers were first to admit that this cropping system would not remove excess P. When asked what the plans were for the new P regulations, they stated that ration levels had been reduced to .38 percent, but that they would have to find an off-farm place to spread manure. They are hoping to set up an agreement with a vegetable producer, orchard, custom grower, etc., to perhaps sell some of the solid manure.

I found it interesting that in the first area of the Northeast to be faced with tougher P management

Dairy Farm Planning Resource Guide Soon Available

Pennsylvanians who are considering building new dairy facilities or expanding their current operations will soon have a new tool to get the job done. The Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders, along with Penn State's Dairy Alliance and various industry supporters, are compiling a Dairy Farm Planning Resource Guide to assist farmers in the correct steps to take and resources available to use when building or expanding a dairy operation.

This guide, a result of the Dairy Development Executive Task Force meeting conducted in April 2002, will include a comprehensive list of the steps that should be taken in preparing for and constructing a new dairy operation or expanding an existing one. It will include information on business planning, permitting, community relations, construction planning, operational planning and much more.

The value of the guide lies in its resources. Within each step, the guide will list resources that dairy owners may contact for help or information. As the resources listed will continually grow and change, the guide will be available to producers online. Printed versions will also be available upon request.

"Expanding a modern dairy farm is a complex and time-consuming job. The Dairy Farm Planning Resource Guide should help producers save time and avoid costly mistakes during the planning and construction phases of a building program," said Chuck Cruickshank, Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders president.

The guide should be available by late fall 2002.

guidelines, dairy producers were still having difficulty adjusting to the new requirements. The problem has gone unmonitored for so long, that it is difficult to find a way to adapt any early solution to the problem. I feel that producers in the rest of the Northeast can look at this as an opportunity to better situate their business for future production and growth. It is very likely that similar guidelines will be hastened into place in our region as well, so whatever can be done to reduce P waste now should be implemented. This can be accomplished by upgrading manure systems, reducing P feeding levels in the ration, and soil testing to determine P content, etc.

Knowing where you are today in relation to future regulations will ease the transition into a more intensive waste management system.

Ag Engineer Looks At Dairy Housing Trends

DAVE LEFEVER
Lancaster Farming Staff

YORK (York Co.) — In any discussion about animal facilities, Dan McFarland keeps coming back to a basic set of criteria.

The extension agent from York County will approve of your dairy setup as long as it provides the animals a dry, roomy, well-ventilated area, and offers confident footing and easy access to feed and water.

For "any kind of dairy housing, show me that you have provided those five things," McFarland said. Beyond those basics, the best type of barn depends on individual preferences and what will best suit the particular operation.

For example, some producers insist they can take better care of their cows in a tie-stall barn. Others claim that they can provide the best care in a free-stall barn/parlor setup.

To McFarland, as long as the animals are well-kept, either kind of facility is fine.

"It absolutely depends on the individual situation," he said."Whatever system gets people excited about taking care of their animals gets me excited too."

In milking center construction, McFarland noted two trends.

One, producers are installing "very simple" swing-type parlors, with greater length than many older parlors. In these setups, cows are milked on alternating sides of the parlor with"swing" milking units. This type of parlor allows the option of adding more units to the already existing structure at some point in the future.

McFarland said he is also seeing a lot of interest in converting tie-stall barns into "step-up" parlors. These offer a relatively inexpensive way to increase milking efficiency. McFarland said step-up parlors are often viewed as a transitional stage until cash flow provides the ability to install a new parallel or herringbone "pit" parlor. Some producers, however, are finding "they are very happy" with the step-up parlor, and may be willing to use it for a longer period of time than they originally thought.

One thing dairy farmers should avoid is putting in a system with which they become dissatisfied, but feel they must keep using in order to justify it.

What about the future of automatic milking systems (AMS)?

"While robotic milking may not be for everyone, there may be some factors that play into justifying it," McFarland said.

Limited availability of labor and increasing preferences for more flexible lifestyles could help promote this relatively new technology in the U.S.

With one AMS unit able to handle 50-60 milk cows, McFarland said that smaller dairies stand to benefit most from this system. In the Netherlands, he pointed out, robotic milking has contributed to the preservation of family farms.

Several Pennsylvania dairies have installed AMS on a trial basis, including the Heindel operation in southern York County.

"Economies of scale are not in its favor at this point," McFarland said. But while an AMS costs about twice as much per cow as a milking parlor setup, "that's not saying it's going to stay there."

For calf facilities, McFarland said he's seeing a trend toward more permanent buildings, which in some instances can offer improved shelter and easier care than hutches.

Greenhouse structures can work well for young stock, but managers have to be extra attentive to proper ventilation and temperature control, he said. It's a good idea to provide hutch-like shelters along with the greenhouse to "let the calf decide" on the most comfortable environment depending on conditions.

Learning To Manage People Is A Leap Forward For Dairies

UNIVERSITY PARK (Cent re Co.) — Learning to manage people is a process that takes time and practice, but it's best to spend that time practicing techniques that are proven and will work when mastered. The trial and error approach to human resource management leads to years of disappointment, family strife, and high employee turnover rates. Managers who first learn the principles of effective human resource management take a giant leap toward business success.

Brian Craig, dairy manager at Murmac Farms in Centre County, took his giant leap forward by attending Penn State Dairy Alliance's course Management Essentials for Dairy Success (MEDS).

It was in this course that Craig says he found himself as a manager.

"I learned certain techniques that I could use to become more effective with people," he said. He uses those techniques to better understand the twelve people he supervises. The result is a positive work environment where he can better communicate with his people and help them to improve at their jobs.

Craig goes on to say, "I've learned not to be a hard charger all the time. I take an interest in my people and show that I care about them as individuals."

Two of the key concepts that MEDS teaches are organization and delegation. Many dairy managers struggle to assign responsibility to others because they are uncertain of the worker's ability. They find it difficult to move away from the role of hands-on worker to the role of coach and supervisor. When managers retain a strictly hands-on style, they prevent others from developing into their true potential.

MEDS teaches managers how to create work conditions that lead to improved performance. Participants learn about obstacles to performance and how to remove them. The objective is to help managers grow and develop in their supervisory role, so that they in turn can help their people to develop.

Craig applied these concepts to his own management responsibilities at Murmac Farms. His responsibilities include herd health, cow comfort, housing, parlor operations, and milk quality control.

"I've better organized myself and the people I'm responsible for," he said. "I try not to get tied up with any one individual during the day. I delegate responsibility and encourage people to take the initiative and achieve. We are all more productive and satisfied because I let my people take an active role in getting

Dairy Checkoff Award Goes To Penn State Students

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) Chairman Karl Kroeck presented a $1,000 check to the Penn State Food Ingredients Team during the recent PDPP board meeting.

The dairy farmer funded checkoff program rewarded the team for two years of participation and winning top honors in the 2002 "Discoveries in Dairy Ingredients" contest. The contest is sponsored nationally by the dairy checkoff program as part of the Do it with Dairy® program and is designed to highlight the versatility and functionality of dairy ingredients while providing food science students with marketable experience.

PDPP applauds the Penn State students for their creativity and success in developing Yogurt Crisp, which includes nonfat dry milk among its ingredients. It is a blend of natural strawberry and yogurt bases, coated with crisp batter on the outside.

The award is earmarked for student programs in the Department of Food Science. The goal of PDPP and the American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East is to contribute toward future innovation through students in the food science department.

Nutrient Management: Friend Or Foe?

Virginia Ishler
Penn State Dairy Alliance

It is not surprising that many producers do not have nutrient management on their radar screens. Putting together a plan can be as intimidating and overwhelming as trying to do your own income taxes. Why would a person put themselves through that ordeal if they didn't have to?

The initial response would most likely be there is no good reason. However, even if a farm does not need a nutrient management plan, learning about the many management strategies that can be painlessly implemented, and that comply with regulations currently in place could offer several advantages. In many instances, there are opportunities to lower costs (i.e. feed) on the farm while at the same time maintaining or improving production. There is the possibility to improve the whole farm nutrient balance and the public's perception of farming. Consider the following questions

1. Are lowering feed costs and improving air and water quality at the same time realistic? Phosphorus and nitrogen are the two main elements that are concerns regarding water and air quality. They are also the same two nutrients that tend to be overfed on farms and can increase feed costs substantially. In the current situation of higher feed costs and lower milk prices, this could be the time to seriously evaluate the level of phosphorus and protein being fed. The first step in being good environmental stewards is to reduce the excretion of these elements in the manure.

2. What is the P-index? It is very likely in the next couple of years, phosphorus-based nutrient management planning, instead of nitrogen based, will be in place. The phosphorus index, or P-index, is a tool which evaluates the fields on which manure will be applied. It incorporates a rating system for nutrient transport factors (i.e. erosion) and source factors. Using the P-index scale, determinations will be made if nutrients (manure or fertilizer) can be applied based on nitrogen, based on phosphorus crop removal, or if no phosphorus can be applied.

3. Is there any financial assistance available? There are numerous cost-sharing programs available that provide assistance to producers. Recently, the federal government has allotted funds that can be used towards environmental improvements.

4. How do I know if regulations apply to me? The "foe" for most people lies in the regulation part of nutrient management. The key to finding out if you are in compliance or what direction you need to be going in is by first contacting the right people.

5. How can I become environmentally aware? The PEACCE program (Pennsylvania Environmental Agricultural Conservation Certification of Excellence) was developed to promote environmentally safe agricultural practices among livestock and poultry producers, to encourage them to minimize risks to the environment, and in turn minimize personal liability. By successfully completing three components of the program, producers get recognized who meet or exceed standards as established by PEACCE. They receive a farm sign and are publicly recognized for meeting and exceeding the environmental standards of the program.

More in-depth answers to these questions will occur at the Dairy-PR workshops scheduled at various locations across the state on September 24, October 3, and 16, 2002. The registration fee is $10 per person. The registration fee is offset by funding from the PEACCE program. Detailed information can be obtained by contacting Virginia Ishler at vishler@psu.edu or (814) 863-3912.

Farmers Learn About Dairy Checkoff At PDPP Annual Meeting

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Harold Shaulis, Pennsylvania Dairy Promotion Program (PDPP) vice chairman and Somerset County dairy farmer, welcomed nearly 250 Pennsylvania dairy farmers Aug. 22 to the 2002 PDPP annual meeting and informational luncheon at Ag Progress Days.

Scott Higgins, CEO of American Dairy Association and Dairy Council Mid East shared information about both local and national dairy promotion efforts.

"Since the national dairy checkoff began in 1984, per capita consumption of total milk has steadily climbed, increasing by more than 13 percent," said Higgins.

Higgins also discussed the checkoff program's initiatives to increase milk sales through milk vending machines in schools. A new program will provide schools with the information they need to make a vending machine in their school a reality. The dairy checkoff will also provide grants to schools in the PDPP and Mid-Atlantic Dairy Association service areas of Pennsylvania to help schools purchase selected vending machines. Dairy farmers attending Ag Progress Days were also invited to visit the checkoff exhibit to learn more.

DMI And Marva Maid Join In Nationwide School Milk Pilot

Excerpted from article by Amber DuMont
Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Cooperative

Competition in the beverage industry is fierce. With industry giants like Coca-Cola and Pepsi fighting to quench the consumer's thirst, it's hard for a wholesome and nutritious drink like milk to compete. Milk has finally found the limelight through the innovative Got Milk?™ marketing campaign. Keeping this positive promotion running strong and boosting demand for milk has Dairy Management Inc. (DMI) searching for new methods making milk a more appealing beverage.

Research shows that in the past few years school milk consumption has been declining. Yet, more than 90 percent of all kids (ages 6 to 12) drank at least one serving of milk as a beverage during an average two-week period. Kid "milk drinkers" consume 30.5 gallons of milk annually per capita, which represents 20 percent of total milk beverage consumption.

School milk has been packaged in gabled cardboard containers for years. Meanwhile the rest of the beverage industry has transitioned from glass, to aluminum and plastic numerous times and in numerous shapes and sizes to suit consumer demand and life-style changes. It is finally time for school milk to catch up.

Dairy PLUS From Around The Co-Ops

Teaming up with DMI for a nationwide school milk pilot test program, Maryland and Virginia's Marva Maid processing plant was instrumental in introducing unique milk packaging and stocking the first milk vending machines in schools throughout Chesapeake, Va., during the 2001-2002 school year.

Marva Maid joined eight other processors in the study conducted by the National Dairy Council, the American School Food Service Association, and coordinated by DMI. The study focused on measuring the impact of an upgraded milk product on milk consumption and attitudes toward milk in schools. Milk product upgrades included improved packaging, increased flavor variety, improved storage, refrigeration and presentation.

Boston and California, the study replaced the standard cardboard gabled milk cartons with single-serve plastic milk bottles in school cafeterias. Researchers placed different sizes of plastic packaging in test schools. Marva Maid tested an eight-ounce plastic bottle.

Marva Maid provided a variety of milks to test schools including one percent, whole, chocolate and strawberry. The small eight-ounce containers Marva Maid tested are convenient to open and reseal, plus the clear plastic construction lets the consumer know at a glance what fund refreshing flavor is packaged inside. While final results of the study will not be available until early October, "early results are very positive," said Janet Grubbs, program coordinator for Southeast United Dairy Industry Association (SUDIA).

Marva Maid has agreed to continue working with DMI during the 2002-2003 school year, on a second study. This extended study will focus on improving milk's image in schools and on the retail level.

This expanded study is constructed to determine if there is a link between school milk demand and retail demand. Starting off the school year this September, Marva Maid will provide milk in plastic 10-ounce containers for participating schools. By early next year that same product will be offered on the retail level. The study will examine if students recognize the same product on the retail level, and if so increase demand.

Milk Protein Used to Make Edible, Water-Resistant Film

Jim Core, ARS

WYNDMOOR (Montgomery Co.) — An Agricultural Research Service (ARS) scientist has received a patent for her method to turn a milk protein into water-resistant films that could be used to coat or package foods.

The method removes the protein casein from milk by using carbon dioxide under high pressure. Casein, which solidifies when milk is acidified, is the chief ingredient in cheese. It is also used as a food supplement and as an ingredient in nonfood products including adhesives, finishing materials for paper and textiles, and paints.

Until now, it's been difficult to obtain films, fibers, and molded materials with acceptable mechanical properties from casein. That's because moisture can dissolve casein.

The new extraction method takes advantage of casein's natural structure to form water-resisting films or coatings, according to Peggy Tomasula, the method's inventor. Tomasula is a chemical engineer at the ARS Eastern Regional Research Center (ERRC) in Wyndmoor, Pa.

Films act as stand-alone sheets, while coatings are thinner and adhere directly to the product. Both can act as a barrier to outside substances while protecting a product from damage or contamination. The new material remains intact when exposed to water, unlike water-soluble, protein-based films patented in the past.

The film can lock in moisture, according to Tomasula. Edible coatings might be used to coat dairy food products such as cheese, or could be used as part of a laminate in packaging for cottage cheese or yogurt. Flavorings, vitamins or minerals could be added to the coating to enhance the flavor and reinforce nutrition. The method could also be used to develop biodegradable packaging materials from casein. Casein may also be combined with plasticizers to soften and improve the flexibility of casein-containing, nonfood materials.

In pilot plant studies, ERRC researchers are further evaluating the method's potential. The patent is available for licensing, and ARS is seeking commercial partners. ARS is the USDA's chief scientific research agency.

Business Planning Assistance Program Refueled

MIDDLETOWN (Dauphin Co.) — Thanks to a renewed grant from the Pennsylvania Department of Agriculture, the Business Planning Assistance Program (BPAP) will continue through 2003. BPAP is administered by the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

BPAP is a grant-supported program designed to stimulate the development of business and strategic plans for dairy producers in Pennsylvania similar to those used in other industries. Currently, BPAP has additional support from the Appalachian Regional Commission. The program is under the direction of Alan Bair, facilitator of the Pennsylvania Dairy Stakeholders.

To encourage producers to build and implement a business plan for their venture, BPAP can cover up to 75 percent of eligible costs of having an independent specialist evaluate the farm business. Eligible services include preparation of a feasibility study or business plan, managerial services or other services associated with planning and business management. The program does not cover services such as routine accounting and tax preparation, feed ration development, crop services, or other production-related areas.

The program's maximum award to one business is $1,500. The actual amount a business receives is contingent upon the approval of the project. Once approved, the actual amount of funds dispersed to the business is based on the viability of the project, the project's economic impact and availability of funds. Applicants are required to match 25 percent of the total project costs.

At the time of application, producers interested in the program are provided a list of professional business consultants who perform the types of services covered by the Business Planning Assistance Program. Since the program's inception, that list has grown from five consultants to 21.

Since 1999, 35 total BPAP projects have been completed in the state, paying out $46,289.25. Thirty-four of these were funded by the PDA grant.

If you are a producer interested in the Business Planning Assistance Program, or a consultant interested in being included on the list, provided to participants, please contact Michelle Jaymes-Parks at (717) 948-6609 or mmj113@psu.edu.

Scientists Discover Two Longer-Living Lactobacillus Strains

Two new strains of beneficial Lactobacillus acidophilus, Priority strain A2010 and A2020, have been isolated for use in dairy cows and calves by Priority International Animal Concepts (IAC).

"New research shows microbial strains A2010 and A2020 survive in a cow's rumen longer, tolerate high concentrations of bile in the intestinal tract, bind to intestinal cells, and help maintain animal health," announced Richard Breunig, Priority IAC president. These characteristics are required for the bacteria to be able to survive and impart their beneficial effect in the harsh rumen intestinal environment.

"Higher levels of beneficial bacteria have been scientifically selected to help maintain a healthy rumen micro flora, keep cows on feed and be better prepared to stay healthy through transitions." Breunig. said.

It has long been thought certain beneficial bacteria can aid in the fight against "bad" bacteria or pathogens. Recently Texas Tech and the American Meat Institute published research showing some Lactobacillus acidophilus strains could reduce the presence of E. coli when fed to beef cattle. Researchers at the University of Georgia's Center for Food Safety published similar findings.

"The research team isolated dozens of strains from dairy cows and tested them under harsh rumen and intestinal environments to find ones that not only survive but thrive," said Breunig. "We wanted to find the right strains to add to the Priority One and Priority Calf formulation that would provide help with the multiple stresses today's high performing animals are experiencing." The new strains will be included in the Priority One and Priority Calf fed product.

Delaval Offers New Tank Line

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — DeLaval Inc., the world's largest producer of cooling tanks, introduced a new cooling system product line earlier this year. The Century DXC cooling system offers improvements in efficiency, cleaning, temperature control, and tank construction. The Century DXC is available in 11 tank sizes ranging from 800- to 8,000-gallon capacity.

An expanded cooling plate area in a unique plate configuration accelerates cooling speed. The system allows complete compressor operation with as little as 10 percent capacity. The Century DXC condensing unit's advanced technology combines high performance with low energy consumption. Milk temperature is controlled electronically to within one degree of accuracy. Cooling function is monitored with alarms in the event of temperature deviations or power failure.

Programmable controls dispense measured cleaning compounds into the proper cycles, eliminating the need for hand-filled containers. Wash temperatures are electronically controlled and monitored, with warning alarms to signal drops in water temperature or cycle interruptions.

The tank's design is visually upgraded with a distinctive new shape and ergonomic advances like a swing-away tank lid and redesigned ladder. All controls are readily accessible from the front of the tank to facilitate monitoring and maintaining the system. The large, easy-to-read display can be adjusted simply and quickly. The larger tank sizes offer ample space for an optional logo.

Three-Phase Electrical Power For The Dairy Farm

Dennis Buffington Agricultural, Biological, and Engineering Extension
Penn State

Do you have three-phase electrical power available at your dairy farm? If so, are you taking advantage of all the benefits of three-phase power? If you don't have three-phase power available, have you checked with your local utility company recently to inquire about the requirements to get three-phase power for your farm?

As dairy farms become larger and more mechanized, there is an increasing need for larger electric motors. Three-phase electrical power needs to be considered on all dairy farms, especially if you are planning for any renovations or expansions.

The benefits of three-phase power include:

- Three-phase motors cause little or no voltage flicker from motor starting.
- Three-phase motors cost considerably less (20-50 percent less) than comparable single-phase motors.
- Three-phase motors have longer useful lives than single-phase motors.
- Three-phase motors are available in a much larger range of horsepower sizes.

The disadvantages of three-phase power are:

- Three-phase motors are not necessarily more efficient than single-phase motors.
- Three-phase power may mean that commercial rates (rather than residential rates) will be charged for your electricity usage and that demand charges will be assessed. Therefore, three-phase power may cost more than single-phase power, depending on your local utility company and also your electricity generation supplier.

How can you get three-phase power? You must check with your local utility company to inquire where the nearest three-phase service is available and get a cost estimate of providing the service to your farm. Also find out whether you will be charged residential or commercial rates for the electricity used on the farm. In most cases, the answer will be that you will be charged a commercial rate, but don't let that answer discourage you. In this era of deregulated electricity, you may find that the benefits of three-phase power offset the higher cost per kilowatt-hour for the electricity.

Be prepared to negotiate with your local utility company on the issue of three-phase power. I know one farmer who needed three-phase power because he was

Illinois Hosts Red and White Dairy Cattle Association 2002 Convention

BELVIDERE, Ill. — The newly formed Midwest Red and White Dairy Cattle Association (RWDCA) hosted the 33rd convention July 29-31 in Belvidiere, Ill.

In the Red and Whites for Blue 2002 Show, Judge Brian Behnke of Wisconsin placed 86 Red and Whites. Both the quality and numbers of cattle registered increased for this year's show.

Senior 3-year-old Spungold Tahoe-Red dominated the show. She was the first senior 3-year-old, intermediate and grand champion and best udder of show for breeder Dale Bendig and co-owner Richard Green. Reserve intermediate champion was Mad-About Rubens Ave-Red-TW, bred by Deeann Bauerle and exhibited by junior exhibitor Craig Blough, both of Ind.

The RWDCA Land of Lincoln Convention Sale averaged $2,735 on 94 live animals and choices, the second-highest average ever in the history of the sale. In addition, 11 embryo packages totaling 48 embryos sold for an average of $334 per embryo.

Topping the sale at $8,000 was the first-choice female by a mutually agreeable sire from EX-94-2E three-time All-American Renita, consigned by Carrousel Farms of Orangeville, Ill. The second high-seller at $6,300 was Holbric Ali Missy-Red (VG-86), the reserve All-American junior 3-year-old in 2001, consigned by Brian and Mark Olbrich of Harvard, Ill. Richard Green of Middletown, Del., purchased both top-selling animals to add to his group of Red and White cattle.

The Red and White Dairy Cattle Association was founded in 1964 to promote the breeding and development of Red and White dairy cattle and has been located in Crystal Spring, Pa., since 1975.

Largest Wisconsin Dairy Installs Integrity Manure Treatment System

CHAMBERSBURG (Franklin Co.) — The Van Der Geest Dairy, Wisconsin's largest, recently undertook the installation of a new manure treatment system. The INTEGRITY System, when fully operational, could virtually eliminate the annual $300,000 cost of hauling manure slurry that has plagued the farm since its latest expansion.

According to company spokesman, Timothy Rensch, "The INTEGRITY Nutrient Control System was developed by Nutrient Control Systems, Inc. of Chambersburg, Pa. with cooperation from the academic and regulatory communities. It is not a slurry system. It is actually a manure treatment system that utilizes proven technology to eliminate odor problems while removing and isolating key nutrients. The system can easily meet either N or P based nutrient management plans," Rensch said. "The cost savings are realized by the patented INTEGRITY PulseJet that permits land application of the treated wastewater without run-off or over-application up to five miles from the storage lagoon.

The INTERGRITY Manure Treatment and Nutrient Management System was recently installed at the dairy teaching facility of the State University of N.Y. in Cobleskill. The system has also been adopted by Virginia Tech at its dairy teaching facility in Blacksburg, Va.

purchasing a grain drying system with a 30-horsepower fan for each bin. The utility company would provide the three-phase power at no upfront charge, but then the farmer would be charged a commercial rate for his electricity usage. The farmer negotiated that he would pay $3,500 to have the three-phase power installed and then continue to pay residential rates.

Even if you get three-phase power, you can continue to operate your present single-phase motors on one leg of three-phase power, but then you are obviously not reaping all the benefits of three-phase power. In the event that you cannot get three-phase power, three-phase motors can be operated on single-phase power, but only if a phase converter is used. Phase converters are costly and can be expensive to operate.

Dairy farmers must establish energy strategies to cope with the threats of higher prices for energy and an insufficient supply of energy. Decisions regarding single-phase or three-phase power represent one component of the many components in developing, implementing, and updating an energy strategy.
